SAGGING SAPLINGS on Trans-Canada Highway divide between Tillicum and Admirals are mark of vandals who went on a rampage Christmas Eve. Highways officials say the vandalism is one of a number of cases that have plagued highway crews in recent months. "I guess there is someone out there who doesn't like the shrubs there," a spokesman said. "Or maybe it's a concerned taxpayer who doesn't like to see his taxes spent in such a way."

Gold price soars past $500 mark

Times News Services

Gold soared to more than $510 U.S. ($587 Cdn.) an ounce in Europe today amid concern over a reported Soviet military buildup in Afghanistan, the continuing U.S. Embassy siege in Tehran, and higher oil prices.

The U.S. dollar was lower almost everywhere.

In New York, the Canadian dollar was down 3-100 at $0.8506.

Gold was up as much as $36 from pre-holiday prices in Europe, following the metal's surge through the $500 barrier in New York on Wednesday.

In London, gold opened at a record $507.50, moved to an all-time high fixing of $508.75 and by noon was trading at $511. This compared with $485.50 at the close Monday.

Zurich, Europe's biggest bullion mart, also saw the price start at $507.50 and move to $511 by mid-day, up from $475 last Friday, the last trading session in the Swiss financial centre before a long Christmas holiday.

In Paris, where prices are inflated by a four-per-cent govtax, bullion hit a record $523.96 an ounce at the morning fixing.

"While the price may rise some more, the gold game is becoming more and more dangerous with these unbelievable prices," a dealer in Zurich said.

"Middle East oil states are still buying heavily, but they're also selling for the profits. So while the small speculator may be right in buying now in the short term, he could well be hurt in the medium term.'

Swiss gold dealers said the "little people" have jumped on the gold bandwagon — usually a sign prices may go down.

"But the market now has become so big that this time the small investor and speculator may be right," a dealer said. "In fact, we think the gold market now has become so big that it is impossible to kill it."

Both London and Zurich dealers said buying orders were "pouring in" with demand for gold extremely heavy. Many orders came from Middle East investors and speculators.

The price of silver was up as today's basic price of 1,000-ounce certificates in the Victoria area, according to the Scotiabank, were $27.75 U.S. bid per troy ounce and $28.75 asked. Last Friday's prices were $24.20 and $24.60.

The price of gold is more than double its $226.375-a-troy-ounce close in London at the end of 1978, and almost $400 more than its the $134.50-an-ounce close at the end of 1976. The old record for gold was $496, set during the European trading day Dec. 20.

"Nobody wants to sell, and there's a general feeling gold's going higher," said one commodity exchange trader in New York.

"We're looking for gold in the $600s by the end of January," said Vincent Tese, a partner in the commodity house of James Sinclair and Co. The house last December predicted gold would be in the $460-$520 range by the end of 1979.

Gold had risen to $444 an ounce in early October, but then slid to less than $400. The metal began rising again in early November, after the seizure of U.S. hostages at the U.S. embassy in Tehran.

West German dealers blamed the new U.S. dollar decline on the worsening of the American-Iranian dispute and reports of Soviet military activity in Afghanistan.

But the dollar has been falling month after month and each time dealers give a different reason for it.

In the last two months the dollar has lost 11 cents against the pound and 8 pfennigs against the mark.

Antarctic reef holds cruise ship

PUNTA ARENAS, Chile (AP) — The cruise ship Lindblad Explorer, aground in the Antarctic after transferring 114 tourists and crew members to a Chilean icebreaker, restarted its engines but could not break free of a reef which punctured its outer hull, a Chilean naval spokesman said.

"The ship swung around on the rock and was able to drop both anchors, but she could not get free," a spokesman for Chile's 3rd Naval District said Wednesday.

The 2,236-ton Explorer plowed into an uncharted reef Monday. There were no injuries among the crew, passengers or a movie crew returning from filming the final scenes of a science-fiction thriller about a virus destroying the world.

The spokesman said a skeleton crew of 11 men and 10 officers, including Captain Eric Lars Granquist, remained aboard the Swedish ship. It was reported in Gerlache Stait off the coast of Graham Land.

An ocean-going Russian tugboat, the Urugan, arrived alongside the stranded vessel early today to try to pull the ship loose.

Divers set to check capsized freighter

A team of seven Esquimalt-based divers is poised to check the hull of the capsized freighter Lee Wang Zin for signs of life if raging North Pacific storms give them the chance.

The hulk has now drifted on to Kendrick Island, five miles north of her last reported position on Wednesday.

A U.S. Coast Guard cutter and a Rivtow tug from Vancouver are standing by but have been unable to get a line on the Lee Wang Zin.

The U.S. cutter Munro was expected to arrive on the scene in 10 to 12 hours. She is equipped with a helicopter pad and has a sick bay and team of divers.

Southeast winds gusting to 55 knots, hail and waves of 15 to 20 feet were hampering rescue efforts.

Canadian and United States rescue teams have said there is a slight chance survivors among the crew of 30 Taiwanese sailors might be trapped in the hull of the Panamanian-registered bulk carrier which overturned in heavy seas on Christmas Day.

But those hopes dimmed as the number of unoccupied life rafts found in the area climbed to two. One body has been recovered and gale-force winds and heavy rain were expected to continue.

Meanwhile, the 222-metre Lee Wang Zin, bound for Japan with iron ore pellets it took on at Tasu in the Queen Charlotte Islands and 1,000 metric tonnes of bunker C fuel oil, drifted into U.S. waters on Wednesday.

The U.S. Coast Guard has assumed command of the rescue operation with the change of jurisdiction but a U.S. Navy diving team is not expected to reach the area until later today.

The divers from CFB Esquimalt and a Labrador helicopter from CFB Comox are waiting in Prince Rupert, 95 kilometres south of the wrecked ship.

The Canadian Coast Guard cutter Alexander Mackenzie and the commerical tug Cindy Mozel out of Prince Rupert stood by the 15,528-ton Lee Wang Zin until today.

Capt. Ron Aumonier of the Rescue Co-ordination Centre here said divers are needed to get a line attached to the freighter which is slowly drifting toward the rugged Alaska coastline.

A U.S. cutter armed with oil spill containment equipment had been dispatched from Seattle but there were no reports of major oil leakage from the battered freighter.

Aumonier said if the weather gives divers a chance they will either try to enter the hull to search for signs of life or at least tap on it to see whether anyone will answer.

"The vessel overturned very quickly," said Lt.-Cmdr. Dick Pepper of the rescue centre. "There is a possibility of the crew being trapped on board.

"There is always a chance of survival. We never give up hope. Stranger things have happened."

The shipwreck occurred after the vessel discharged the Canadian pilot at Triple Island in Dixon Entrance, an often-stormy body of water west of Prince Rupert.

The rescue centre got a garbled, faint SOS and had to do some detective work to find the Lee Wang Zin because there was no position report or enough time to track the signal electronically, Aumonier said.

Soviets add fuel to Afghan coup

Times News Services

TEHRAN — Afghanistan's Marxist President Hafizullah Amin was overthrown today in a coup staged by his old-time political foe, Babrak Karmal.

The coup report by Iran's official Pars news agency, quoting Radio Kabul, came as Soviet troops and equipment poured into the country to aid in an offensive against anti-Communist rebels. There was no word on Karmel's position on Soviet-Afghanistan relations.

Fragmentary reports from Kabul also indicated "some involvement of Soviet military personnel" in street fighting in the capital.

The coup followed a Christmas Day airlift of thousands of Soviet troops to Kabul, capital of neighboring landlocked, but strategic Afghanistan. The troops deployment was reported by State Department officials in Washington on Wednesday and strongly criticized as "blatant military interference."

The new regime immediately imposed a dusk-to-dawn curfew in Kabul and ordered residents to remain indoors.

The reported coup came against a background of growing discontent in the aftermath of a year-old armed insurrection by Moslems opposing the Soviet-backed, Marxist rule in effect in Afghanistan since the May, 1978 coup which toppled Mohammad Daoud.

Political analysts in Tehran said any assessment of the change would have to wait until more details of the Soviet military airlift become available.

Karmal, founder of the Parcham Communist Party, served briefly as prime minister in the regime of assassinated former president Nur Mohammad Taraki.

Karmal went on the air soon after seizing power and

Islam N-bomb in the works?

KUWAIT (Reuter) — A Kuwaiti newspaper says Pakistan has reported to Saudi Arabia and Iran on the advanced stage it has reached in producing "an Islamic nuclear bomb."

The newspaper Al-Siyassa, quoting diplomatic sources, says this is one reason behind the visits of Pakistan's martial-law ruler Gen. Zia ul-Haq and his foreign affairs adviser Agha Shahi to Saudi Arabia and Iran, respectively.

Libya has greatly helped Pakistan in producing the bomb and it may be ready before the middle of the next year, the newspaper says.

Iran gets tough on spy trials

TEHRAN (UPI) — Iran, declaring itself virtually at war with the United States, warned that all the American hostages will be tried as spies if the U.N. Security Council imposes any economic sanctions against it.

Three American clergymen — Revs. William Sloane Coffin and William J. Howard Jr., and Catholic Bishop Thomas Gumbleton — ended their controversial Christmas visit to Iran and flew home via London early today, although the questions they raised about the exact number of hostages held in the occupied U.S. Embassy for 54 days remained unresolved.

The clergymen, who are carrying 33 personal messages from the hostages, said they saw all the captives — 43 of them — but the State Department insisted there are 50 hostages and the matter was unlikely to be settled until Washington and the clergy compared lists.

In a direct challenge to the United States, Iran's foreign minister said if Washington won Security Council approval for its plans for an economic blockade, Tehran would retaliate by putting all the hostages on trial as spies.

President Carter has said he would ask for sanctions against Iran and U.S. diplomats have been sounding out U.N. delegates about it.

The foreign minister previously said the hostages would be called only as "witnesses" rather than defendants at the grand jury hearings and diplomatic sources said they were likely then to be freed.

Ayatollah Khomeini Wednesday warned Iran was already "in a state of war, in a state of economic war" with the United States and said this could develop into all-out military confrontation.

Frenzied thousands greet Rhodesia guerrillas

Times News Services

SALISBURY — Thousands of jubilant, chanting blacks surrounded Salisbury airport Wednesday and hordes of them tore down a barbed-wire fence and mobbed the first group of guerrilla officers to fly home under the Rhodesian ceasefire accord.

They also smashed the windows of a bus carrying the officers in a frenzy to reach them with hugs and kisses. The South African Press Association reported that 100,000 blacks surrounded the air field. Police estimated the throng at about 15,000.

"We are free now, that is what we have been fighting for, that is what we have won," Rex Nhongo, commander of the Zimbabwe African National Liberation Army (ZANLA), told reporters as he arrived with 41 comrades from Mozambique.

Supporters of the Patriotic Front alliance, led jointly by Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo, welcomed the guerrilla commanders who arrived in camouflage battle dress.

The crowd was charged twice by police dogs as it waited for the commanders.

The guerrilla leaders are to help run a ceasefire between their men and Salisbury forces following this month's London peace agreement.

Under terms of the pact, the guerrilla chiefs are to summon their men from the bush and assemble them at control points while elections are held to lead the British colony to independence.

The first guerrillas to arrive belonged to Nkomo's Zimbabwe People's Revolutionary Army (ZIPRA), led by their commander, Lookout Mafela, who said he also is known as Masuku.

The ZANLA plane arrived after dark but thousands of Patriotic Front supporters, shouting and cheering, formed a massive welcoming committee for the guerrillas.

In an emotional moment the commanders of the two Patriotic Front armies embraced and hugged each other.

The airport crowd was Rhodesia's first mass demonstration since the peace agreement was signed in London.

As a bus carrying the 43 ZIPRA officers drove slowly from the airport, ecstatic crowds surged forward, trying to shake hands with the guerrillas through the windows of the bus. Many carried banners supporting the Patriotic Front.

It has been four years since Mugabe has set foot in Rhodesia and three years since Nkomo was last here. It is not yet known when they will return.

Meanwhile, a helicopter en route to one of the camps crashed today when it struck a pylon near the city of Mtoko, killing all three British soldiers aboard. They were the first casualties among the Commonwealth force sent to monitor the ceasefire.

British and guerrilla sources also reported the death of senior military commander Josiah Tongogara in an automobile accident in Mozambique today. The sources said Tongogara played a leading role in negotiations that led to the peace settlement and was a strong spokesman for the ceasefire.

Esquimalt divers to check hull movements and knowledge of the Lee Wang Zin's course resulted in a coast guard pilot in Prince Rupert being ordered to fly over the area and he found the vessel.

It was not known what made the ship capsize but Canadian and U.S. pilots have reported hull damage.

The Canadian pilot who found the wreck said its forward plates were dented about 35 centimetres on both sides but not cracked open.

A U.S. coast guard helicopter pilot also reported gashes in the hull near its bulbous bow. He said the ship was well out of the water, visible from stem to stern, and did not appear to be in danger of sinking. The starboard side was higher than the port side.

Debris was floating in an eight-kilometre radius of the ship which sailed into 120-kilometre winds when it left Prince Rupert. Winds had abated to about 80 kilometres an hour Wednesday night and the temperatures were about seven degrees Celsius.

Its cargo was in the form of 54,000 tons of iron pellets, about the size of peas, which coast guard officials said can be dangerous in heavy weather because they shift easily.

The recovered body remained unidentified aboard the Cindy Mozel.

Soviets fuel Afghanistan coup pledged "democratic freedoms for the Afghan peoples, release of political prisoners, jobs for all the unemployed and good relations with all neighbors (Iran, Pakistan and the Soviet Union)."

The new regime also promised to respect the holy faith of Islam and the clergy — apparently directed at rebellious Moslem insurgents, led by the Afghan Islamic clergy, who have waged a violent campaign to overthrow the two successive Marxist, Soviet-backed regimes in Kabul since former president Daoud's overthrow.

A broadcast appeal called for support from "all Moslems irrespective of their sect — the clergy, soldiers and tribesmen, government employees, intellectuals, male and female workers."

Reports of a coup came after diplomatic sources in New Delhi said the deteriorating position of the old Marxist government in Kabul had precipitated an unprecedented Christmas airlift of thousands of Soviet troops and equipment to Afghanistan.

The massive airlift of Soviet combat soldiers continued into Afghanistan Thursday and as many as 50,000 additional Russian troops remained poised within easy striking distance just north of the Soviet-Afghan border.

Despite a strong U.S. protest against the deployment, the airlift to the civilian airport at Kabul, the Afghan capital, resumed at daybreak Thursday, U.S. officials said.

News agency reports from neighboring Pakistan quoted travellers returning from Kabul as saying that convoys of Soviet troops and military equipment were choking main roads to the city.

U.S. officials, monitoring the continuing buildup here, said they could not provide accurate estimates of how many additional Russian planes had been flown into Afghanistan Thursday.

Brave - or ignorant - move may flood a lovely valley

HUDSON'S HOPE (CP) — Leafless trees glitter with frost under the pale winter sun turning this northeastern B.C. valley into a real-life Christmas card.

From every room of Ethel and Leo Rutledge's house there is a wide view of the beautiful terrain.

But it might not always be this way. The valley and the Rutledge house, along with many other Peace River ranches, will be flooded if B.C. Hydro proceeds with its proposed hydro-electric dam at Site C on the river.

Many ranchers have already sold to the Crown corporation and are leasing their former land until the water starts to rise. But the Rutledges are going to stay and fight.

"This is my home," said great-grandmother Ethel Rutledge. "Every nook and cranny means something to me.

"There's the spruce tree where my little girl used to think fairies lived in a hole in the trunk."

Site C is about six kilometres southwest of Fort St. John and would create a reservoir about 80 kilometres long, flooding the valley toward here.

A report prepared for Hydro says the project will flood 41 homes and thousands of hectares of farmland. The B.C. Land Commission says the land flooded will total 6,480 hectares, of which 2,000 are in the agricultural land reserve.

Only 75 of the Rutledge's 500 acres will be submerged if the dam goes ahead. But on those acres are their house and the broad meadow in front which stretches down to the river's edge. This land is the choicest part of the property.

Rutledge, 69, is one of the best known and respected ranchers in northern B.C. He has lived in the Peace River valley for 50 years — as a packer, fur trapper big-game guide and rancher. Officially he is retired but he still farms his fields and is constantly called upon as a consultant by guiding and conservation organizations.

He cares as deeply as his wife about losing his home. But he looks at the dam proposal in a much wider context.

"I can contend with the hassle of rebuilding — though it's not what I had planned to do at this stage of life," he said.

"But I'm concerned with the whole valley. I think it's wrong to flood it. The issue is simply not negotiable. A decision to flood is absolutely irreversible. Once the land is gone, it's gone.

"These Hydro decision-makers must either be very brave or very ignorant to take this god-like stance. It took a million years to build this valley and they are making a decision in a few years to wipe it out."

It's the permanent loss of farmland which Rutledge feels is a non-negotiable issue.

"As long as we have the soil, we have options available to us in B.C. We could come overnight to a $5-a-gallon gas but river valleys can support thousands of people.

"You've heard all about what this valley can grow. It is the most liveable place in the whole Peace River and it can support many holdings. These big holdings can be broken up when human pressure increases, as it will in time."

Hydro says the dam is needed to meet increasing power demands, which it says are rising at six per cent yearly.

If approved, the $1.5 billion proposal would see a 60-metre earthfill dam across the river and six generating plants producing a total of 975,000 kilowatts, about half that of the Revelstoke dam, due to start electrical production in 1983.

The consultants' report says the dam does benefit both the local area and the province.

It estimates $140 million will be injected into the economy, half of that into the local sector. It also says thousands of jobs will be created during the eight-year construction span.

Rutledge says the dam won't solve B.C. energy problems.

"It would just be a small, stopgap solution to our energy shortage and when we've lost the land, we've lost it forever.

Rutledge is also concerned about Hydro's application to renew its energy export licences which will be considered by the National Energy Board in January.

"Hydro is probably applying for twice what it wants and if it is permitted to establish a firm export policy, then there is nothing left to discuss — every river in B.C. will be dammed," he said.

Nanaimo man charged with Christmas murders

NANAIMO (UPC) — Charles Joseph Lynn, 46, of Nanaimo, was charged Tuesday with the Christmas Eve double murder of his estranged wife and her male companion.

He was remanded in custody to Friday after a brief court appearance, a police spokesman said.

Ethnia Mary Lynn, 47, and a male companion, whose name was not released, were shot in the driveway of the woman's home late Monday night.

A number of children inside the house were not injured.

Arson charged in Duncan fire

DUNCAN (CP) — Richard Parker, 23, of Duncan has been charged with arson following a Christmas Eve fire which caused an estimated $500,000 damage to the Duncan Financial Centre on Trunk Road.

The fire broke out on the second floor and burned through several offices. Some offices on the third floor suffered smoke damage and a few shops on the ground floor suffered water damage.

The fire was discovered about midnight Monday and firemen had it under control an hour later.

Wrestling Day makes comeback

WILLIAMS LAKE (CP) — Wrestling Day went down for the count at 100 Mile House but it's making a comeback here on Jan. 2.

Wrestling Day in some parts of the Cariboo country is what Boxing Day is to Christmas — a day of rest and relaxation.

Williams Lake dumped Wrestling Day as a civic holiday in 1977 but revived it this year. However, not everyone observes it.

At 100 Mile House, 82 kilometres south of here, the village observed Wrestling Day last year but now has dropped it.

"We received a number of complaints, primarily from union shops who had to pay people the day whether they worked or not," said village administrator Robert Carter. "Any federal, provincial or municipally-declared holiday is a paid day."

Missing boater likely drowned

SECHELT (CP) — James Downie, 30, was missing and presumed drowned Wednesday after a 3.5-metre sailboat capsized in rough weather Tuesday near Sechelt, on the Sunshine Coast.

William Ross MacDonald, 29, and Jane McOouat, 28, made it safely to shore All three are from the Pender Harbor area, 30 kilometres north of Sechelt.

Police said the search for Downie's body will continue today.

Traffic on ferries shows increase

VANCOUVER (CP) — The number of passengers and vehicles carried on B.C. Ferries during November increased over the same period last year, the ferry corporation says.

Passenger use rose 14.2 per cent while vehicle use rose 15.2 per cent in that month. Statistics for 1979 show passenger use increased 9.2 per cent while vehicle traffic increased by 9.8 per cent.

Routes recording the biggest gains in vehicle traffic were Earl's Cove to Saltery Bay with a 21.3-per-cent increase, Horseshoe Bay to Departure Bay with a 20.8-per-cent increase and Prince Rupert to Masset with an increase of 19.4 per cent.

Man's body found on river bank

CHILLIWACK (CP) — The body of an unidentified male was found on the south bank of the Fraser River on Christmas Day by a resident of this Fraser Valley community.

Police said it appeared the body had been in the water for some time and foul play is suspected.

An investigation is continuing.

Flood damage bill $500,000

LANGLEY (CP) — This municipality will hand the provincial government a bill for $500,000 needed to repair damage caused by recent flooding.

Ald. Dr. Elford Nundal said Wednesday that $250,000 is needed to replace a culvert that was washed out during the flood. The rest of the money would be used to repair damage in other parts of the Fraser Valley municipality.

Premier Bill Bennett signed a cabinet order Dec. 20 authorizing $2.5 million in provincial aid for flood cleanup. After that, costs will be shared on a 50-50 basis between provincial and federal governments.

More flights

VANCOUVER (CP) — CP Air will add two flights to its weekend schedule between Vancouver and Prince George, B.C., effective Jan. 11, to handle increased traffic between the two cities.

New southbound flights will leave Prince George every Friday and Sunday at 11:30 p.m. while the northbound flights will depart Vancouver at 10 p.m. Friday and Sunday. The flights will use 132-passenger Boeing 727s on Fridays and 112-passenger Boeing 737's on Sundays.

Now you're talkin' taste.

Evaporating shield

What goes up, must come down. That's certainly the case with respect to the industrial emissions of sulphur dioxide. The pollution causes acid rain, an environmental problem that is jeopardizing hundreds of lakes in Ontario and the eastern U.S. Although the federal environment ministry has declared acid rain to be environment enemy number one, there is another hazard of equally ominous proportions that is getting less attention.

The guilty substance in this case goes up, but doesn't come down. Chlorofluorocarbon, a chemical that was widely used as a propellent in aerosol sprays, rises slowly through the stratosphere where sunlight breaks breaks it down and releases chlorine that in turn erodes the ozone layer. The ozone layer filters ultra-violet radiation from the sun.

Eighteen months ago, the U.S. banned the used of chorofluocarbons in non-essential consumer products such as hairspray and deoderant. Canada has been slow in developing similiar legislation, although John Monteith, the chief of regulations in the Contaminants Branch of the Environment Ministry, says industry has voluntarily cut the use of cholofluocarbons in aerosols by 50 per cent since 1976.

The ministry first published its regulations last March, but an objection (since removed) from Dupont of Canada, held up legislation. The new rules, affecting only hairsprays, deoderants and antiperspirants, are expected to become law next March. Once the legislation is in place, Monteith says that use of cholofluocarbons in aerosols will be 70 to 75 per cent less than the 1975 level.

Just as Canada is getting its act together on aerosols, the National Academy of Sciences in the United States now says aerosol legislation is merely postponing the destruction of the ozone layer. The American institute says that continuing to use the substance for other purposes will eventually deplete the ozone layer by as much as a sixth in the next 30 years.

Restrictions on aerosol propellants in Canada and the United States and a few other countries have only cut production of the chemical by about 20 per cent. In many other countries in is still being used. But the greatest threat rests with its industrial and commercial applications.

The Academy monitors the world-wide production of the chemical and it estimates that 25 per cent is used for refridgerants, for which there is no good substitute. Another 25 per cent is used in solvents and plastic foams including some types of insulation.

The Academy is starting an assessment of the damage that would be caused by a 17 per cent reduction of the ozone layers. Some scientists have forcasted drastic consequences — climate changes, increased instances of skin cancer and genetic mutations in plants and animals. Others disagree, saying there is cause for concern but not panic.

It was relatively easy to ban chorofluorocarbons in most aerosol sprays. But tackling ways to reduce uses of the chemicals in other industries will be as hard and probably as expensive as coming to grips with the sources of acid rain.

Canada, of course can't do it alone. Monteith says his department is beginning to look at the other uses of the chemicals in the hopes of establishing alternatives and/or controls. This country was slow in developing aerosol regulations. Perhaps it could show more initiative in dealing with the broader applications of the ozone-eater.

Group rates

The activity that goes on behind the scenes in a large hotel is to many unbelievable. In total, the workers amount to a small army. When all the silverware and linen are accounted for, there is more than enough equip a large army with cutlery and clothing.

But out of Miami comes a report of a hotel with equally unbelievable statistics. This operation will accommodate 16,000. It is spread over 160 acres. As for food, it needs up to 150,000 bushels of barley and 12,000 tons of ground up corn stalks.

Judging by the menu, you might guess the place is fit for nothing more than animals — and you'd be right. In fact, it's designed for cattle. But in Miami? Well, actually it is near Miami, Manitoba, a town 80 kilometers southwest of Winnipeg.

The idea according to Miami Feedyards Ltd. president Harvey Dann is to provide farmers a winter reprieve from their herds so that they can take a holiday. "You can go to Florida for the winter as well as sending your cattle to Miami," he says.

Twenty four investors put up $1 million each to get the hotel off the ground. They hope it will become the largest feedlot operation in western Canada.

The only thing that hasn't been publicized is price. Not much attention has been paid to single and double occupancy. And not one word about weekend package rates.

Sell the Team, not Trudeau

OTTAWA — For each of his elections, Pierre Trudeau has put on a different mask: In 1968, as Student Prince; in 1972 as Philosopher-King; in 1974 as Fighting Politician, and in 1979 as National Saviour.

Trudeau's mask this time really will be something completely new and different. Behind it, you won't be able to see him at all.

Three reasons have convinced Liberal campaign deep-thinkers to run Trudeau as The Man Who (Really) Isn't There:

No obstruction

— Anti-Joe Clark sentiment is strong, particularly in Toronto and in B.C. It's bad tactics to obstruct the line of sight between voters and their object of immediate dislike.

— Anti-Trudeau sentiment is strong. It's bad tactics to remind voters that he's still around.

— Pro-Trudeau sentiment is strong. It's bad tactics to remind voters that he won't be around for long.

To keep Trudeau out of sight as much as possible, Liberals will put him on display as little as possible. He won't begin his formal campaign until after the New Year, and during it he'll limit his appearances to two a day. To be with Justin, Sacha and Michel, and thereby to give voters' memories a nudge that he's shouldering the burdens of single parenthood, Trudeau will fly back regularly to Ottawa for long weekends.

Some of the old gang around Trudeau is being broken up. Senator Keith Davey is gone as campaign strategist. Chief aide Jim Coutts will remain — "Trudeau trusts him; he's irreplaceable", says an insider — but under order to hug the ground. Toronto lawyer Jerry Grafstein has been dropped as head of the Liberal advertising campaign.

Grafstein's departure is particularly interesting. The Liberals have decided Trudeau has no place on the TV screens of the nation. Grafstein's 1974 and 1976 ad campaigns featured Trudeau in every clip. This time, the Liberals will go in for "negative" Clark-bashing ads and for "positive" adds about their new policies, featuring speakers other than Trudeau.

To signal the strategy to come, Trudeau, when asked whether he would take part in a TV debate with Clark and with New Democrat Leader Ed Broadbent, as in the last election, said he was not "particularly interested".

Lloyd Axworthy, Art Philips: high profile Liberal Team players.

As parties always do when in doubt whether they can sell their leaders, the Liberals will set out to sell their Team.

Former Finance Minister Donald Macdonald's decision not to run means that the Liberal team lacks a quarterback. Those who'll be sent out onto the field include attractive new and newish MPs such as B.C.'s Art Phillips, Manitoba's Lloyd Axworthy, Toronto's Roy MacLaren, Cornwall's Ed Lumley and Montreal's Don Johnston, as well as attractive potential candidates such as Toronto businessman Bill Dimma, and former Nova Scotia Premier Gerald Regan.

To emphasize the Team, and thus to de-emphasize himself, Trudeau will announce policies jointly with Team members. These policies — guaranteed annual income; worker participation in management; new economic nationalist measures — are being put together by the party rather than by Trudeau's own office. Reporters looking for detailed explanations thus can be directed to the Team member responsible, rather than Trudeau.

Trudeau won't disappear. He'll be prominent in Quebec, where the more he's seen the more votes the Liberals will win.

Elsewhere, to respect the tradition that parties are led by a leader, Trudeau will put on the mask of an elder statesman. Sort of a benign presence, uninvolved in daily decision-making but lending, out of "duty" and for a short time only, his wisdom his experience and his international reputation. An honorary chairman of the board, that is, rather than a chief executive officer.

One flaw

This strategy's flaw, it might seem, is that voters are being asked to buy a used car from a salesman who's said he'll have left the firm by the time they bring it in for servicing.

Shrug. To raise such an objection is to be naive and tiresome. The firm itself, you see, is the Liberal Party. The natural governing party.

Would you rather buy a used car from Clark, who might move the firm to Jerusalem, than from the firm which has run our business for us for a half-century, excepting only those unseemly interruptions of six years by John Diefenbaker, and of six months by Clark?

So if Trudeau does happen to come your way, or to flash by your TV screen, take a good look. You may not see him again until February 19. Instead, from now until election day on February 18, it'll be the Liberal Party versus Clark.

Farsighted budget

The federal budget has been received with both acclaim and disgust. Premier Bennett is among those who view Mr. Crosbie's budget with disgust, and he has criticized the lack of funding for shipbuilding in B.C. (such funding has been made available to shipbuilders on the east coast) and has deplored the maintenance of high interest rates.

Mr. Bennett's reaction is typical of the ill-considered criticisms which have followed both the budget announcement and the high interest policy. While Mr. Bennett's disappointment with inequitable funding for shipbuilding is understandable, it should be said that B.C. is relatively wealthy as compared to the maritime region. As good Canadians we should be willing to make some sacrifices for our less fortunate partners in confederation.

Less understandable is the Premier's reaction to high interest rates. Mr. Bennett feels the construction industry, and other components of the private sector, will suffer under the burden of high interest rates. If the number of prospering construction firms is any indication, the construction industry is healthy enough to absorb such a burden without injuring profitability or jeopardizing employment. If the average consumer is expected to endure higher interest rates, surely the industrial and commercial sectors can be tolerant, or better still, set an example.

Mr. Crosbie's budget is farsighted, and will require the patience of Canadians to ensure that its objectives are achieved.

Yet this budget is a promising solution to our economy's problems, and if we must tighten our belts perhaps it is the price to be paid for years of living beyond our means. Ignoring the signs of a weak economy, we have continued to show a lack of respect for the value of the Canadian dollar.

It is not surprising that our dollar receives little respect outside Canada. By seeking loans on an individual basis, and by accepting an increasing national debt to obtain those things which we can not afford, we are selling both our financial independence and our self-respect.

The latest budget is a reflection of the economic realities that we would like to ignore, but must recognize and contend with, for our own sake, and for the sake of those who must make the best of what we leave behind. — Hugh C. Dyer, Victoria.

Worth funding

Just before the defeat of the present Conservative administration the minister of small business announced that the federal government was not prepared to continue funding the Trident Aircraft Company of Sidney. In his opinion the company was not financially viable. This was apparently based on the assumption that the methods Trident intended to employ were not sound from a technological standpoint. If one was to investigate those personnel at Trident who are responsible for developing the production methods, one would find former employees of companies such as Boeing, Lockheed, Canadair and de Havilland. All these and the many former employers have all been very successful in the production of aircraft and the techniques used by these manufacturers were to be employed by Trident. If these methods are so unsound I am sure [illegible] air travel has not joined the horse and buggy as being unrealistic in this age.

As other levels of government are involved in the funding exercise, I can only hope that they examine the consequences of this pessimistic attitude. Firstly, some $100,000 per week in wages and salaries will be lost to the Saanich Peninsula area. The tax revenue to the federal and provincial governments accruing from these payments is in the order of $1.3 million per year. As Vancouver Island has so little secondary industry, very few of the employees presently at Trident would be able to find employment. This will mean an increase in unemployment benefits of $1.2 million per year, although eventually most of the skilled personnel will leave the Island, mostly to the other aerospace companies in eastern Canada.

The secondary effects, such as the loss of sales tax revenue generated in these salaries being spent, extra employment created in servicing this increased financial activity and the many other "spin-offs" makes the $4 million the federal government has reneged on seem small beer indeed.

As the various party machines gear up for the coming election, the prospective candidates should spend a little time thinking about the consequences of their actions.

If Trident is forced into bankruptcy, Sidney, British Columbia and Canada will all lose. They will lose some $3 million in direct taxes from employees of Trident, at least that much again in taxes on salaries generated by the secondary effects; Canada will be forced to pay increased unemployment benefits; work that would have been kept in Canada will be forced abroad; skilled personnel will move to other parts of the world willing to risk industrial investment; the Trident Aircraft Company will be picked up for a song by some foreign investor and he will reap all the benefit of Canadian taxpayer's money use to develop the aircraft. The incentive to invest in secondary industry in British Columbia, or anywhere in Canada, will take a severe jolt, and this at a time when the federal government is spending large sums in advertising to encourage Canadian consumers to seek out Canadian produets. — Jon K. Page, 9559 Lapwing Place, Sidney.

Good cause

For some years now rents in military married quarters have been steadily increasing quietly through the years with very little mention from the wives of servicemen. It appears now the ladies have decided to say something about recent raises. They have for good cause wished to remain anonymous because of retaliation from the military authorities and they certainly are justified in doing so. As they pointed out, military families living in married quarters are exempt from certain rights such as their civilian counterparts have in such helpful agencies as the rentalsman, etc. They are subject to far more military regulations and interference in their personal and domestic routines. As pointed out the military are also their landlords having complete control over families living in married quarters. As a former serviceman and now employed as a ship's engineer officer of a civilian ship I can comment with some experience on the said issue.

Being a civilian I have no say in service affairs of course but I can safely say the junior serviceman has "no bargain in rent rates in married quarters". — Jack Flynn, 402-230 Oswego Street.

Head scratchers

Regarding the abuse of the English language (Town Talk, I believe) particularly by those who are heard by millions of people on T.V. and radio, the following weirdies had me scratching my head -

1. News, Sept. 27. "Even among future generations McGeer has never been wildly popular."

2. News, Sept. 27. "Bill Bennett showed little worry on his exterior."

3. News, Nov. 28. "Hopefully a settlement will be averted."

4. News, This week. "Mother Cecilia accepted her prize with her usual 'humbleness'."

I'm confused, how about you? — Lorna Faulkner, 1484 Finlayson Place.

At long last

After many years of "fancy politik ing" and loud protestations of "Canadian unity" by the Liberals and disruptive tactics by the NDP, at long last, from the woodwork of Canada there appeared a leader who was not scared to put his position on the line, knowing full well that it could be political suicide.

We must hail this man who at least tried to untangle the finances of Canada, a legacy of inept government that was willing to sacrifice Canada to it's own ego. His thoughts were for the well being of Canada, not Joe Clark.

All real Canadians must see this and put their thoughts on the ballot. — George Walters, 722 Larkhall Road.

Unnecessary

It appears that inability of reaching some sensible compromises, lack of co-operation of the combined forces of the opposition with our government have precipitated a winter federal election which is certainly not in the interest of the Canadian people.

In spite of the fact that some items in the Crosbie budget were somewhat questionable and the total lack of pensions problems totally ignored (except for veterans and veterans' widows), this country was not faced by civil strife and/or threats by foreign powers.

The wisdom (or lack of it) of the financial provisions contained in the budget should have given an opportunity to be tested, maybe over a short period of time, instead of being condemned outright.

That the general reduction of our international debt should not have been considered a priority is absurd: in fact, it is a priority regardless of what opposition parties would make us believe.

Unfortunately, some voters will be lured by inevitable promises of superficial, immediate solutions to our economy, and discard the unpleasant realities and the call to some sacrifices which are not excessive, if contemplated within the framework of a total global level.

The cost, the inconvenience and, in some instances, the hardships for some northern inhabitants of our vast country become almost irrelevant when confronted by the duty of exercising our franchise in a thoughtful and responsible way. We, the people, are free to make the final decision and no amount of propaganda of all kinds can influence this decision: in the ballot box we are alone with our conscience. — E. I. Lattes, 432-200 Dallas Road.

Majority needed

Just the other day, Dec. 13, to be exact, NDP leader Ed Broadbent, assisted by Liberal leader Pierre Trudeau, and an abstaining party, aborted Joe Clark's infant government because of a supposedly unbearable federal budget. So, on Feb. 18, 1980, Canada's voters are — within one measly year — forced to undergo the costly operation of another election.

Needless to say, the platforms of the parties are going to be glaringly unmistakable. The Conservatives will stand by their theory that national bankruptcy means personal bankruptcy; the Liberals will disparage Joe clark as a weak leader; the NDP will press for the governmental control of everything except their government; and that abstaining party will more than likely call for total abstination whenever there is a crucial vote in the House of Commons.

All I can say is, I hope Canadian voters elect a majority government, otherwise federal elections might become a semi-annual affair. — John Wickstrom, 3264 Shelley Street.

"Today the last laugh belongs to Australia"

By DAVID LAMB
The Los Angeles Times

SYDNEY — For most of its history, Australia was not a place you went to by choice. You were sent, or came because you were desperate. Settled by convicts, it was a drab and empty outpost at the edge of the world, a land that even Australians loved to hate.

Australia, wrote poet A.D. Hope in the 1930s, was "a vast parasite robber-state where second-hand Europeans pollute timidly on the edge of alien shores." In a kinder moment, Hope defined his homeland as "the Arabian desert of the human mind."

"The British — or "bloody Pommies" as they are known here — joked about their oafish Aussie cousins, viewing them as crude, lazy, good-natured and, usually, drunk. Most Americans' knowledge of Australia started and ended with the kangaroo. Western diplomats often were assigned to Australia, it seemed, so they could catch up on their reading before retirement.

Today, though, the last laugh belongs to Australia. The crises of the world have not crossed Australia's frontiers. Fuel shortages, overpopulation, terrorism and violent urban crime are not even vague concerns here. Australia is prosperous and peaceful, a land of mellow contentment whose golden age has not yet dawned.

Its minerals — $25 billion in uranium reserves alone — represent an immense source of potential wealth. Australia is 75 per cent self-sufficient in fuel production. It is the world's largest exporter of meat and wool and a major producer of wheat, sugar, vegetables and dairy products. It has only 14 million people — two per square mile — in an area nearly as big as the continental United States.

"This place really is unique," Arthur Schiff, a New Yorker who moved to Australia 10 years ago said. "Sure, you have to get away sometimes because you're so isolated here in terms of books, culture, criticism. But when that plane lands at the airport, I always love being back. There just aren't any real problems here."

Outside the floating restaurant where Schiff was sharing dinner with American friends, the harbor and city of Sydney slipped slowly by: the Opera House with its soaring, sail-like roof; the wide, still streets rambling through the original convict settlement, the Royal Botanical Gardens ablaze with blossoming flowers, the waterfront estates and high-rise apartments nestled around the coves of Double Bay and Mosman Bay. The summer evening was warm, and the sun hung for a long time behind the Sydney harbor Bridge and Cockatoo Island beyond.

"I'm not sure I'd want our daughters to stay here indefinitely," Schiff's wife, Rita, said. "But for me, Australia is like a summer camp for adults. There's very little competition. The weather's always great. The living is easy. No one knocks himself out.

"The biggest trauma Australians have is when the Bee Gees come back here, where they were brought up, and say they owe nothing to Australia. I mean, for Australia that's a crisis. That's their idea of national trauma."

When the Schiffs moved here in 1969, only one per cent of the wage-earners were making more than $10,000 a year; today, 41 per cent are. Home ownership — about 75 per cent — is the highest in the world; 90 per cent of Australians own a television set; garbage collectors earn $20,000 a year, and true poverty is unknown.

In the entire state of New South Wales (population 5 million) there were only 339 armed robberies last year.

But if Australia remains one of the last bastions of the good life, Australians are a complacement and uninvolved people, dedicated to the pursuit of innocent pleasures, lulled into torpor by the continent's remoteness from the world stage, doubtful of their national stature and role in the international community.

"We have one of the most viable economies in the world," said newspaper publisher Sir Asher Joel, a former state legislator, "but our isolation has insulated us from most of the world's traumas.

"I'm not sure this is all to our good, because you then tend to become a little remote . . . You are detached. It is like looking at TV from a great distance, and not being involved. Because you aren't involved, you don't feel the pressures."

For most Australians, life perhaps has been too easy, too secure. Their nationalism seldom surfaces except during a cricket match or a war, and they have just two historical national heroes: Pharlap, the racehorse, and Ned Kelly, the outlaw.

Australians drink 34 gallons of beer a year for every man, woman and child and gamble $1 for every $3 they pay in federal taxes, according to government figures.

If they have the money, Australians vacation abroad, not at home.

Their national airline advertises, "Fly Qantas to the world" — as though everything beyond Australia's shore were part of another planet.

Most educated Australians say that the nation's complacency is a dangerous thing. Australia is no longer immune from international pressures, they say, and if "the lucky country" is to realize its potential, some serious thought must be given to establishing national priorities and mobilizing national energy.

"Australia stands poised on the threshold of the 1980s more divided within itself, more uncertain of the future and more prone to internal conflict than at any other period in its history," Bob Hawke, president of the Austrlian Council of Trade Unions, said.

Among the crisis areas he referred to was unemployment. Full employment, he said, had been "the cement that bound our society together. That cement is crumbling and, as it crumbles, we can discern the beginnings of fracture in our society."

Just the same, most Western countries would consider themselves fortunate to be in Australia's position. During Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser's four years in power, Australia's inflation rate has been cut from 17 per cent to 9 per cent, and although half a million Australians, or nearly 6 per cent of the work force, are unemployed, the Sydney Morning Herald carried 24 pages of classified job vacancies the other day and the state of Western Australia is expected to be short 17,000 boilermakers, welders, electricians and crane drivers by 1982.

Fraser, is a sheep rancher who has moved Australia back toward its traditional conservatism, re-established intimate relations with Britain and the United States, taken an uncomprimising — and not particularly popular — stand against South Africa's apartheid policies, and searched for new markets and friendships in Asia.

Australia was the first country to formulate publicly a policy on the Indochina refugees and by next June will have settled 38,000 of them.

One-quarter of Australia's annual "migrant" intake now comes from Asia. It is a major new direction for a country that rigidly enforced its "white Australian policy" until 1966 and still fears the "Yellow Peril" of Asians invading this uncrowded land.

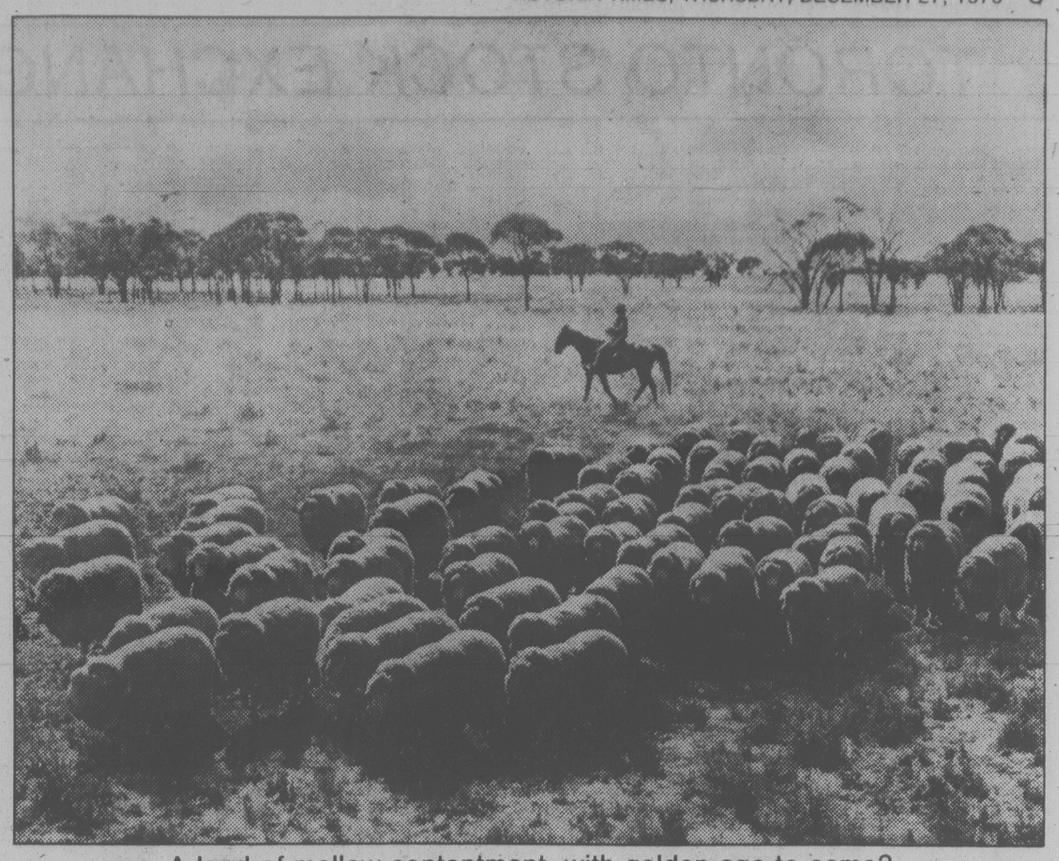
But if Australia is to develop, its greatest need is people. M.J.F. MacKellar, minister for immigration and ethnic affairs, said: "We should be looking toward a population of upwards of 25 million, but there's no way we're going to reach this (without) making major policy changes."

Since the Second World War, more than 3.5 million foreigners have settled in Australia, and today one in five Australians was born overseas. But, from a peak intake of 185,000 new settlers in 1969, the government quota for immigrants dropped to 70,000 last year (including 1,403 Americans).

In past years Australia attracted settlers with campaigns advertising the easy life here. Now the campaign emphasizes Australia's economic potential and its role as a calm island in a troubled world.

Australia's problem of underpopulation is made worse by the fact that the birth rate is dropping. Despite the country's growing population, 50,000 fewer children were born here in 1978 than in 1971. For Australia to be working toward zero-population growth, MacKellar said, is "madness."

Australians greet such imponderables lightly. "Not to worry," they say, "she'll be right." And, given the natural wealth here, she may be.



A land of mellow contentment, with golden age to come?

Instructions for assembling MOMMY AND DADDY, translated from the Japanese:

Congratulations, lucky little children. You are become gift recipients of the latest miniaturized electronic miracle toy from Wojihoji, miniature electronic miracle makers. Your brand new MOMMY AND DADDY is twice as good as your old U.S.-made mommy, three times better than your present U.S.-made daddy and only uses half as much energy.

This is because of the new Wojihoji activator chip (see Diagram A) exclusive with our factory. Before assembling MOMMY AND DADDY, discover the activator chip in Container M and agitate it severely by application of No. 9 sandpaper at the conflux of the prickly points.

Warning: Do not agitate the nethermost points, as this will free the voltage, with the result that the DADDY memory mechanism will forget to keep track of its gin input and become a woeful, helpless inebriate.

Step 3: Adjust the solid state.

Step 2: If your MOMMY AND DADDY makes a blinking, listen carefully to the tone. If it is more acute, turn the diodes (D R and W) counterclockwise and apply two drops of Blinking Suppressor Fluid from container labeled "Hard Cheeses."

You are now ready to assemble. Place the MOMMY AND DADDY in the upright position and insert the tabs in the following seriosity: tab A in receptacle Q; tab B in receptacle A; tab F in receptacle H; and so on in accordance with the natural sequence.

Using a loose wrench, make sure that the jacks are thoroughly decoupled and insert eight quarts of distilled water evenly divided. Depress the "Power On" switch. With this activation, your MOMMY AND DADDY will make a soft humming growl.

This is not to alarm yourself, as it is merely the software functioning in growl mode. However, if the MOMMY AND DADDY issues hostility cries such as, "Get right up to bed this instant, you bad, bad children," turn off the power at once.

What is erroneous? In most cases, the resonator (Y) has been improperly inverted, causing abrasion damage to the cartridge discriminating a screener (No. 3759 in diagram). Ameliorate this by subtending the obverse coil with an arc of ionized filament from your MOMMY AND DADDY repair kit. After 2½ turns, release pressure gently, and you are ready for many years of happy family living.

Amusements: Much, much fun can be had with your new miniaturized electronic MOMMY AND DADDY due to the alacrity with which it responds to your remote-control command module. Every MOMMY AND DADDY is programmed to obey six basic orders, which must be fed into the terminal in the precise following words:

1) Get lost.

2) Clean up that mess I left in the bathroom and make sure you get the ring out of the tub.

3) Buy me a new guitar immediately.

4) Give me the keys to the car.

5) Do my arithmetic homework before I return from the movies.

6) Give me a major credit card.

7) Educational: Many hours of fruitful learning will reward the child from study of his MOMMY AND DADDY'S exciting interior contents with its thousands of minute transistors, miles of incredible wiring and mastery of binary mathematical wizardry.

Unlike your old, cumbersome U.S.-made mommy and daddy, MOMMY AND DADDY does not shout and abuse you when you wish to open it and reorganize its miraculous contents more to your liking.

Care and Maintenance: Due to its exquisite miniaturization, MOMMY AND DADDY may become extremely desensitive to derisory comments about its stature. Do not make jokes about MOMMY AND DADDY being a sawed-off runt, as japeries can enrage your gift and impel it to undertake discordant conduct such as violence of the physique.

Being sternly programmed never to maim its children, there is no need to fear these physical excesses from MOMMY AND DADDY, but it is extremely able to visit such on your old, large-model, U.S.-made mommy and daddy when agitated by japeries about its stature of limitations.

Caution: Listen for the warning signal. If your MOMMY AND DADDY says, "I can whale the tar out of any other mommies and daddies in the house," be warned: MOMMY AND DADDY has slipped into tar-whaling mode. (See "Book of Directions," Chapter 49, "Modes of Di-content".)

Maneuvering agilely, replate the terminal mounting connector in a crosswise transverse (G to N), diminish the output agglutinating posts (Nos. 269 through 821) by depressing the cam override meter deflector, but not until exposing the start-stop mutation pedal (J) to the oscillator binding.

Although it is easier relatively to let MOMMY AND DADDY whale the tar, thus displaying miniaturized electronic superiority.

Indonesia's oil wealth is good news for West

By PETER O'SULLIVAN

JAKARTA (Reuter) — As its enormous potential resources are developed, Indonesia is emerging as one of the best prospects for stable oil production.

And as a friend of the West and a moderate voice within the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, it presents attractive investment opportunities.

A recent huge exploration deal signed by five companies — Mobil Oil, Shell, Comoco, Total, Chevron and Texaco — to spend more than $300 million during the next 10 years marks the end of the fears and problems created four years ago when Indonesia, desperate for money, rewrote contracts.

The signing, the biggest in Indonesia's history of oil exploration, also confirmed that, despite protests from Vietnam, it is staking its claim to the Natuna continental shelf in the South China Sea, regarded as a most promising oil area.

Indonesia is the 10th biggest oil-exporter in the world producing 1.6 million barrels a day, a long way short of Saudi Arabia's 9.5 million barrels a day, but it offers stability not only in supply but also for investment.

On pricing it says it wants gradual small increases, not large jumps which will adversely affect world economies.

While OPEC countries failed to reach agreement on pricing at last week's meeting in Caracas, Indonesia has increased its price by $2 a barrel to $25.50, compared with the highest price of $30 set by Libya.

Indonesia has benefited enormously from the sharp OPEC price increases already this year and its foreign reserves reflect this with a $4.1-billion surplus.

Back in 1975 when the state-owned oil company Pertamina nearly bankrupted the country with its grandiose schemes for diversification, reserves were down to $500 million.

Not all of the current reserves have come from oil as non-oil exports are also well up following last November's devaluation of the rupiah which made it more competitive on the world market.

But oil is still the key, with estimates that it will have brought the country $8 billion in 1979 compared with $6.8 billion in 1978.

The events in Iran and other OPEC countries have highlighted the attractiveness of Indonesia not only as a place to look for more oil but as a safe and reliable supplier.

The exploration potential of the country is exciting oil men, with whole areas of the archipelago relatively untouched so far.

Roy Huffington, whose company runs a joint venture in East Kalimantan (Borneo) and Sumatra, said recently Indonesia has at least 38 tertiary basins — potential oil-bearing geological formations — one-third of which have never been drilled.

"Together these 38 basins cover approximately 770,000 square miles (two million square kilometres) which is more than the combined areas of Texas, Louisiana and the other oil-producing states in the United States southwest," Huffington said.

"In 1977, there were only 135 exploration wells drilled in Indonesia compared to nearly 9,000 wells in the United States, which indicates that Indonesia is still in the early stages of petroleum exploration and there is plenty of room for growth in our programs."

Pertamina got itself into problems in 1975, buying and chartering tankers, running hotels, restaurants and just about every type of business possible, some not even remotely connected with oil.

When the crisis hit it had a debt liability of $10.6 billion. To survive Indonesia needed money fast and one way was to squeeze it out of the oil companies. It rewrote contracts lifting its share in production from 65 to 85 per cent.

This helped its cash problems, bringing in $550 million, but it also had adverse affects, with exploration stagnating and doubts about Indonesia's investment climate.

Pertamina then set about providing new financial incentives while not reverting to the old production sharing ratio.

Its new incentives resulted in exploration picking up in 1978 with promises to spend $230 million. This continued this year with about $300 million promised. Early estimates for next year say commitments will reach $400 million.

Pertamina realizes that it must keep exploration going. Indonesia's economy could have been in serious trouble this year and next if oil prices had not risen sharply.

Because of the lack of exploration in 1977 and early 1978 the number of new oil fields declined. In consequence Indonesia's oil output next year will drop by 100,000 barrels a a day to 1.5 million barrels.

This would have been catastrophic for the country's economy but for the price increases and new prices to come out of the current OPEC meeting in Caracas which will put Indonesia further into the black.

The optimism in the Indonesian camp has also been generated by the so-called key money oil companies have been prepared to pay to get into promising areas.

High on the list are the Natuna blocks, which started a diplomatic row with Vietnam when Indonesia firmly rebuffed Hanoi and issued a strong note which stated Indonesia's claim to the islands.

Vietnam had claimed that boundaries between the two countries had not been defined.

Although the foreign ministry did admit that there might be some areas in dispute, it stated firmly that all concession areas allocated belonged to Indonesia.

It went further saying it would protect any foreign company working in the area.

That the area is promising can be seen by the key money — Marathon Oil has paid out $8 million and Mobil $22 million before a well is even drilled.

To get into Iran Jaya, the Dutch-British Shell group paid out $25 million and set an exploration budget of $137.5 million over 10 years.

Big breweries may slake that big Quebec thirst

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's three big brewing companies are intensifying their quest for Quebec's $430-million beer market with advertising, price competition and new brands.

Labatt Breweries of Canada Ltd. of London, Ont., number one in beer sales across Canada, has fallen to number-three spot in Quebec, with its share of the market dropping below 30 per cent and continuing to slide, market analysts say.

The top dog here is Montreal-based Molson Breweries of Canada Ltd. with 39 per cent, followed by Toronto-based Carling O'Keefe Breweries of Canada Ltd. with 31 per cent and a number-two spot snatched earlier this year from Labatt.

Molson doesn't produce the top-selling brand, but its Export Ale and Laurentide Ale are both in the top four. The most popular single brand is O'Keefe Ale, which captured the top rank from Labatt's 50 Ale.

Both Labatt and O'Keefe have brought out new brands recently. Labatt's Cervoise Ale appeared late in 1978 and O'Keefe's Rallye Ale came out last month as both breweries scramble to imitate Molson's success with its two leading brands.

The thinking in the brewery industry, said analyst David Schulman of the Montreal investment house Geoffrion Leclerc Inc., is that brands of beer have limited life spans. They come and go with each generation of drinkers and usually peak after 20 years, although 33-year-old O'Keefe Ale would seem to defy this.

Labatt brought out Cervoise only after its 50 Ale started losing popularity in Quebec, and O'Keefe is hoping Rallye will have caught on by the time O'Keefe Ale begins dropping so it won't be as dependent on one brand as Labatt has been.

Although Quebec's annual beer consumption of 118 litres per adult is higher than the Canadian average, the beer market in the province has been stagnating for the last four years, and it suffered a blow when wine went on sale in grocery stores in September, 1978.

Quebec, the least English of the Canadian provinces, is the most English in its beer-drinking habits. More than 90 per cent drink ale, an English drink, and only a small market share goes to lager, which dominates in western Canada and parts of Ontario.

And studies show no appreciable market would exist for the light beers that are catching on outside Quebec.

The retail distribution system is also unique in Canada. Quebecers buy their beer in grocery stores, by the bottle or the case. They seldom buy it in liquor stores, which carry only imported brands, and never in brewery stores, which don't exist in Quebec.

Another difference is that each brewery handles distribution itself, although grocery wholesalers are looking at taking this over.

Traditionally, all the breweries have raised their prices at the same time, but when Labatt announced a price hike last month, Molson and O'Keefe didn't follow, forcing Labatt to roll back its increase. A general price rise appears to be in store soon, however.

All three of the big breweries have shaken up their Quebec marketing divisions this year, and all are continuing their advertising assault, spending a total of $15 million in Quebec, one estimate suggests.

Professional sport has been a powerful promotional tool. Molson owns Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League and O'Keefe owns Quebec Nordiques. Labatt, without a professional sporting team in Quebec, brought the Canadian Grand Prix automobile race to Montreal.

But with little hope for increasing domestic beer sales, Canadian brewing companies are working hard on exports to the United States and on widening their holdings outside the brewery field.

Dollar took bumpy ride

By MARY DEPTUCK
The Canadian Press

It has been a year of snakes and ladders for the Canadian dollar — but mostly snakes — as the currency has borne the brunt of poor economic tidings and political uncertainties.

Although the dollar is currently trading within a shaky 85-cent (U.S.) range, its stumble below 84 cents last January marked the beginning of a roller-coaster performance that lasted all year.

"It has been a confusing year," said one bank trader. "But, in terms of natural resources, we're still ahead as a country. . . . We just have to pay for our past sins."

The dollar slumped to the year's low of 83.35 in February and then rebounded to the year's high of 87.77 in April.

Traders, with jobs hanging on their ability to predict trends in the dollar's value, were to learn the art of cautious forecasting.

"In retrospect, the low had been building up for quite some time," one trader said, referring to the dollar's February slump — its all-time low recorded in 1931 was only 3.27 cents away at 80.08.

"It was a combination of everything . . . including dampened expectations for inflation, strikes, balance of payment deficits, public debt and more."

With the April recovery, optimists predicted the dollar would continue the surge and reach 90 cents by year-end. They were disappointed.

"The 90-cent days are gone," said one trader. "It's sad, but the world has gone into a recession and we're hit hard because we're a trading nation. We have to sell no matter what prices we get in the end."

Political uncertainties — including federal elections, the Quebec government's intent to break away from Canada, Quebec's threat to expropriate assets of Asbestos Corp., the Arab Monetary Fund's reaction to the proposed embassy move to Jerusalem and disappointing financial statistics — contributed to continued setbacks.

"The dollar's devaluation also follows closely on the heels of the U.S. dollar's poor showing on world markets," said a trader, noting that the United States accounts for about 70 per cent of Canada's trade. "With an election year coming up in the States too, who knows what will happen to their dollar . . . and ours?"

The Bank of Canada, with the authority to raise interest rates to boost the dollar and fight inflation, pushed rates to unprecedented highs this year, following similar moves by the U.S. Federal Reserve Board.

By raising its rates, the central bank signals chartered banks and other lending institutions, to charge their borrowers more, discourage credit buying and tighten the amount of money in circulation. Prime lending rates for blue-chip clients rose as high as 16 per cent in November.

Although bank traders say 1980 "holds more of the same energy leads and political lags" for the Canadian dollar, most concede that at least one political move, the Dec. 11 Conservative budget, was a step in the right direction.

Budget proposals to cut government spending sharply and lower Canada's deficit to $4.4 billion in 1983 from about $10.2 billion this year — however beneficial for the Canadian dollar — provoked sharp criticism from opposition members and eventually a vote of non-confidence against the Conservative government.

Analysts say a good show next year will hinge, as it did this year, on Canada's energy potential.

"Increased gas sales to the United States, oil discoveries in the Beaufort Sea and off the coast of Newfoundland, world increases in the price of oil, to name a few, all made Canada a very interesting investment this year," one analyst said.

Panic reigns in U.K. quake

EDINBURGH (AP) — One of Britain's strongest earthquakes in years jolted parts of southern Scotland and northwestern England before dawn Wednesday, toppling chimneys, cracking walls and sending thousands of people from their homes in panic.

No major damage or casualties were reported.

At the Institute of Geological Sciences in Edinburgh, the quake recorded between 4.5 and 5 on the Richter scale. A tremor of 4.5 on the scale is considered a moderate earthquake.

"It was pretty severe, one of Scotland's biggest for years," said institute seismologist Graham Neilson.

Although moderate by world standards, it still damaged the institute's seismographic recording machine.

"The machine had to write so furiously, it ate through the paper," Neilson said.

The quake, which lasted about 30 seconds, struck while most people were in bed following Christmas Day festivities. Thousands were awakened and rushed into the pre-dawn darkness in confusion and fright.

"We were all asleep when the four of us in the house were woken up by the tremor," said Brian Ferrier, who lives in Carlisle in northwestern England, near the Scottish border.

"It really rocked the house and we rushed out. It was quite a shock."

Some said the quake was accompanied by a "low rumbling noise" and was followed by several aftershocks.

"I got up to check that everything was all right and there was another tremor, not as intense, which only lasted for a couple of seconds," said Jim Brown, another Carlisle resident.

Only minor damage was reported. In Glasgow, the major industrial city in Scotland, residents of an apartment block were evacuated from the building because of a large crack in one wall.

More reports of damage are expected today when stores and businesses reopen after the Christmas holiday.

Police switchboards were swamped with calls after the quake, which was felt as far south as Manchester, as far north as Aberdeen and on the Isle of Man and Northern Ireland.

Its epicentre was pinpointed between Gretna Green and Longtown, just on the English side of the border with Scotland.

At that same spot four smaller tremors have been recorded since October, seismologists reported.

Scientists said Wednesday's quake was the result of a "mild readjustment in the stress of the earth's crust."

Stronger tremors have been recorded in the Scottish Highlands, including one in 1974. But Wednesday's quake affected more people in the heavily populated areas of Scotland than any in the last 200 years, experts said.

The last major jolt was in June, 1931, under the Dogger Bank in the North Sea. Britain is well outside the world's main areas of volcanic activity but parts occasionally feel minor tremors.

Village vetoes chalet's sale to rich Saudi

SAANEN, Switzerland (AP) — Citizens in this Swiss resort refused to let a rich Saudi official buy a luxurious holiday chalet in their village although he offered to donate $250,000 to the municipal treasury in return for the permit.

By a vote of 221 to 97, they turned down a proposal which recommended that Abdullah Mahdi, head of Saudi Arabia's Civil Aeronautics Board, be granted an exemption from Swiss laws limiting real-estate sales to foreigners. Such exemption is possible in cases involving "relations that require particular protection."

Mahdi, described by proponents of the sale as a "valuable guest of the Palace Hotel" in neighboring, fashionable Gstaad, had promised he would support an agricultural project with $250,000 if he could buy the chalet, carrying a price tag of $1.25 million.

But spokesmen for the opponents said the proportion of foreign nationals owning real estate in the region has "already exceeded acceptable limits," and they had their way.

CRTC nips Salt Spring FM plan

The Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission has narrowed the goals of a proposed family-format FM radio station to broadcast religious programs in southwestern B.C.

An application to broadcast from Salt Spring Island by means of a Class C FM channel was rejected by the commission following a hearing in Vancouver more than a year ago. The commission ruled last week it would approve in principle the construction of a transmitter in the Vancouver area to broadcast on a Class B channel at 107.9 MHz.

The effect is to reduce the range of broadcast power to the Lower Mainland area.

Type of programming and target audience of the station proposed by Ralph Jacobson do not justify the wide coverage proposed by the applicant originally, the CRTC said. Jacobson represents a company to be incorporated.

"The commission considers it important that a station supplying programming of a religious nature attempt to maintain a balanced offering of programs which will serve the diversity of religious needs, interests and beliefs represented in the particular community it is licensed to serve," the CRTC ruled.

It also was concerned that such programs must have significant Canadian content, and noted the applicant should reduce the proposed religious content, particularly in syndicated, non-Canadian religious programs.

Jacobson's application has the support of the prominent churches, including Anglican, Roman Catholic, United, Presbyterian, Baptist and Lutheran faiths, represented by Interchurch Communications, their co-operative broadcasting unit.

A new light on Christmas

She was the first baby born in Victoria Christmas day and her parents called her Pawan Deep — "light of the candles."

Pawan Deep is the 4-pound, 14-ounce daughter of Nirmal Rehill of Calgary, who happened to be in Victoria with her husband, Surinder Singh Rehill, for the Christmas holiday. They were visiting Mrs. Rehill's aunt and uncle, Ranjit Singh Kang of 1406 Andrew.

It's the second special day Mrs. Rehill has picked to have a baby. Her son, Neil Kamal, was the second baby born in Calgary on New Year's Day, 1978.

Fairly glowing this morning, the ecstatic Mrs. Rehill said from the Royal Jubilee Hospital maternity ward: "I'm very happy. The staff in the hospital is so nice. I'm so happy with them."

Pawan Deep was the first baby born in the city Christmas day, but there was another one born at RJH and one at Victoria General later the same day.

Operators defy union, stay out

MONTREAL (CP) — Bell Canada operators in Ottawa defied their union leaders today by voting to continue a 48-hour walkout that disrupted operator-handled calls during Christmas and Boxing Day.

Workers in Hamilton, Ont., also also stayed off the job today after an apparent misunderstanding during the night between employees and Bell management staff.

In Montreal, operators defied their union leaders in a different way. Union officials announced a work-to-rule policy that would have operators speak French only, but English service is continuing normally.

Operators were back at the switchboards in Toronto but were refusing to speak French, union leaders said. But a company official said few calls are ever handled in French in Toronto anyway.

The Ottawa operators re-established picket lines at 7 a.m. EST (4 a.m. PST) today after a noisy union meeting Wednesday night where 131 employees refused a back-to-work order.

In Hamilton, a union spokesman said operators there were returning to work at midnight Wednesday night when management staff refused them entrance to the building. The operators re-established picket lines today.

But Bell's Hamilton manager, Marnie Spears, said the operators weren't barred from returning — they simply weren't needed until later in the day.

Bird artist in biography

The first biography of artist-naturalist Allan Brooks, Allan Brooks: Artist and Naturalist, has been published by the Provincial Museum.

"He was a remarkable man," said museum director Yorke Edwards, a long-time admirer of his paintings. "He was also a soldier, hunter, scientist and one of Canada's best marksman."

"In his day he was the most outstanding bird artist in North America," he added. "Today, of course, we have many good bird illustrators but this wasn't so 50 years ago."

Edwards is pleased with the biography mainly because it reveals a lot about a man who remained somewhat of an enigma following his death 33 years ago.

The naturalist became known to thousands of people in the 1930s as co-illustrator of Taverner's Birds of Canada. The volume aroused the interest of Canadians in bird life and conservation.

He also became widely known in the United States for his paintings in the Book of Birds, published by the National Geographic Society.

Brooks died Jan. 3, 1946, at Comox.

The author of the biography is 97-year-old Hamilton M. Laing of Comox, an authority on B.C. birds, who knew Brooks and his family.

Born in India, Brooks came to Canada with his family in 1881 and farmed at Milton, Ont., and Chilliwack. In 1884 he became a big-game hunter and collector of zoological specimens.

In 1905 he settled at Okanagan Landing where he contributed many articles to scientific journals, studied and painted birds.

An intriging aspect of Brooks' life is his service in the First World War.

If Billy Bishop and Arthur Roy Brown rank as two of the greatest airman, Brooks certainly was one of the most outstanding scouts of the allied army.

His achievements as a marksman and a scout behind enemy lines read more like fiction than fact.

But the war and the slaughter did something to Brooks. When he returned to his beloved Okanagan, he no longer used a rifle.

Edwards was able to assemble some of Brooks' paintings for reproduction in the biography.

The illustrations made a tremendous impact on Canadians of the period. It resulted in making bird watching one of the most popular hobbies today.

Before the judge

A 12-hour pass that led to a three-day absence from jail has cost Gordon Wesley Botha, 18, an extra 30 days at Wilkinson Road jail.

Botha pleaded guilty Monday in provincial court to being at large without lawful excuse Dec. 8 after he was granted the leave while serving a previous two-month sentence — also for being at large.

Judge Fred Green was told Botha was given an 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday pass, played pool, had some drinks with friends and the next day found himself in Courtenay. Realizing he was overdue, Botha telephoned the jail and said he was en route.

He arrived back on the following Tuesday.

Keith G. Thorne, 22, was sentenced to two months in jail concurrent to time being served for similar offences after he pleaded guilty to using a stolen credit card in Vancouver.

Court was told Thorne produced a VISA card in payment for service at the Castle Hotel lounge. The card was in the name of Daniel M. Laverre, a person known to Thorne, and the waiter on checking it discovered it had been reported lost.

Thorne said he had lived with Laverre until they had a disagreement and after leaving discovered the VISA card among his own belongings.

Gerald James McLeod, 21, of Edmonton, was fined $200 and put on 18 months probation for joyriding a boat off William Head penitentiary.

He pleaded guilty to taking a vessel with intent to operate it last July 22. Police said he and two other men obtained the $800 boat at Weir's Beach and ran it for 10 or 15 minutes before returning it undamaged.

Shaun P. Carey was fined $100 when he pleaded guilty to being in possession of a restricted drug at Queen Charlotte City and failing to appear when ordered.

Winter Driving Notice

Snow Area Spot Checks

At this time of year and in areas subject to heavy snow conditions, you will often see special signs requiring that your vehicle have good winter-tread tires or carry chains or, in some cases, that chains be mounted. For your safety and that of other motorists, these signs are authorized by law.

During the next few weeks, random checks will be carried out by the RCMP in problem driving areas, more particularly the Hope-Princeton, the Squamish Highway to Whistler, the Fraser Canyon, but including other sections of road on Vancouver Island and the rest of the province, subject to snow conditions. The operation will be in conjunction with the Attorney-General's "Counterattack" programme. Drivers of vehicles not properly equipped may be turned back or charged.

The Ministry of Transportation and Highways is doing its best to clear snow and maintain our roads in winter to make them safe. Before driving into snow areas, make sure you have good winter tires and are carrying chains to make your vehicle safe. Watch for snow removal equipment, special signing, and please drive carefully.

Hopes for 70s not realized

By JIM COYLE

TORONTO (CP) — As it turned out, we didn't cure cancer, the mini-skirt didn't last and our manned ventures into space got no farther than the moon.

Now, 10 years later, it's time to take stock of the predictions we made for the brave, new world of the '70s.

A poll conducted in 1969 showed Canadians to be among the most optimistic people on earth. But if the decade didn't quite produce the incarnation of our loftiest ideals, it did manage to avoid some of our most dreaded pitfalls.

Substantial numbers of respondents expected man to find a cure for cancer, reach another body in space and solve the problems of air pollution.

We expected a more permissive society and legalization of the use of marijuana.

Most Canadians thought we would retain the monarchy, but Canadians of French-speaking and non-English-speaking origin expected the country to become a republic.

We said the mini-skirt and nudity would survive, but expected long hair and beards to disappear.

Time magazine boldly predicted that "nudity onstage and on the screen, perhaps even outright pornography, will be taken for granted."

And, like a soothsayer, it said: "The new frontier of shock will probably be violence and cruelty."

In 1969, Marilyn Brooks, a leading Canadian fashion designer, displayed a distinct ability to predict the trends of the future.

"By 1980, being over 40 will be no problem," she said. "People will lead healthier lives."

Designer Susie Kosovich said: "Fabrics will get clingier and show the body for some time and, while seethrough and bareness are at their fashion peak, they will be an accepted part of everyday living in the 1970s and everyone will be taking shaping up for granted."

Political fortune-telling is difficult at the best of times and the '70s produced many surprises. Time said third and fourth parties were likely to develop as strong forces in the U.S. But as the 1980 presidential election draws near, it's clear the two major parties still rule the political roost.

In December, 1969, Esquire produced a wicked parody of the New York Times, a tongue-in-cheek projection of what the paper would be printing on Nov. 3, 1976.

The writers were slightly off-base with a headline that read: "Agnew Proclaimed President." The '70s, it turned out, produced a more ignominious end to Spiro's political career.

But the magazine struck a bull's eye with an eerily prophetic glimpse of a disgraced Richard Nixon, central figure in the decade's biggest scandal.

In an article called Mankind's Last Best Chance, Look magazine struck a tone of desperate optimism for America as it entered the '70s.

John Poppy wrote: "In spite of a real potential for disaster, America now has its best chance to become a model society that will glow for the whole world just as America originally did."

But as the decade ends, the Stars and Stripes are shredded in Islamic countries and a crazed religious fanatic holds the U.S. to ransom.

Gloria Steinem maintained that America needed a woman president by 1976. William F. Buckley Jr. presented an equally convincing case for a black president by 1980. Neither has happened.

The Camp David agreement and subsequent easing of tension between Egypt and Israel belied the prediction by some pessimists that the confrontation would become a "new Hundred Years' War."

The safest and, perhaps, wisest course was steered by Kenneth Huchincloss, Newsweek's general editor in 1969.

Less concerned with predictions than with trying to make some sense of the tumultuous '60s, he wrote: "We are still too involved, have set too much in motion, have disturbed our institutions and ourselves too greatly to have any very clear idea how things will work out."

But there are those who are eternally searching for a limb to climb out on, no matter how flimsy.

Billed as a "virtual landmark in the history of capital scientific parapsychology," the prognostications of Maha Yogi A. S. Narayana are wide-ranging and fearless.

Among his predictions for the '80s are, the demise by March of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini; the reduction of the Soviet Union to a third-rate power; the emergence of the United States of North and Central America as a new superpower; the total breakdown of the Japanese economy and the appointment of Pierre Trudeau as secretary-general of the United Nations.

Trudeau clearly was the dominant Canadian of the decade. And 76 per cent of persons surveyed in 1969 thought he would head the government in 1980.

Harrisburg fatal claim

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — A couple who lives 3.2 miles from the Three Mile Island nuclear plant today sued the owners of the facility for at least $10,000 in damages, claiming the March 28 accident there was caused the still birth of their daughter.

In their federal court suit focusing on the nation's worst commercial nuclear radiation leak, Edward and Perri Kiick, of Manchester, Pa., named as defendants Metropolitan Edison Co., operator and part-owner of the plant; General Public Utilities, of Parsippany, N.J.; Met-Ed's corporate parent, and Babcock £ Wilcox, designer of the plant.

Mrs. Kiick, who was four months pregnant at the time, said she called Metropolitan Edison March 29 and was told she had nothing to worry about.

CEC manager Wally Pickering sees reason for cautious optimism next year

By AL FORREST

Victoria's construction industry took a turn for the better at year's end and the outlook for the 1980s is for even more growth.

Building permits in the capital region for the three-month period from Oct. 1 to Dec. 1 totalled $36.9 million, up 12 per cent from $32.9 million at the same time last year.

And more than $50 million worth of projects is on the books for the new year.

At the top of the list for 1980, in dollar value, are the $21 million contract for the main section of the new Victoria General Hospital, closely followed by the Tillicum shopping centre, which could cost more than $18 million.

About $7 million in construction is planned at the University of Victoria in 1980 and another $5 million is the estimated cost of Sam Bawlf's condominium project on the waterfront in the 1000-block Wharf.

The total also includes $2.5 million for the trade and convention centre, a key to the future prosperity of the city.

In releasing the numbers, Canada Employment Centre manager Wally Pickering said Victorians could enter the 1980s in a state of cautious optimism.

"I hope all these planned projects go through," he said.

"It would make a positive impact on the local contruction industry if they do."

Construction, he said, was the weak point in the economy of the capital city during most of the 1970s and these projects give hope for the future.

He said a survey by his information officer Dan Bowes showed that building permits issued during the most recent three months totalled $36,984,591 in the capital region.

Biggest increases came in the City of Victoria, Sidney and North Saanich.

Permits were down in Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt.

Areas that showed increases in building permits during the three months (Oct. 1 to Dec. 1) with 1978 figures in brackets were:

Victoria City $10,954,918 ($7,457,402).

Sidney $4,636,579 ($1,819,494).

North Saanich $2,685,446 ($1,541,649).

Those showing decreases were:

Saanich $12,832,366 ($14,676,815).

Oak Bay $538,834 ($945,077).

Esquimalt $629,485 ($735,520).

Central Saanich $1,261,120 ($1,838,682).

Western Communities $3,445,843 ($3,911,002).

Biggest project in Victoria City during the most recent three months was a building permit for a $2.2 million apartment project at 1745 Leighton in November.

In October there had been a $1.3 million contract for a medical dental building at 2020 Richmond.

In Sidney the biggest permit was for a $1.3 million airplane manufacturing plant for Trident. The building will be completed, although the future of the company is in doubt.

Biggest project in Saanich was $1.2 million for a shopping complex at 3995 Quadra.

In Esquimalt a project for three townhouses totalled $135,000 while alterations to a liquor store totalled $123,000.

In Oak Bay a bank addition was worth $140,000.

Projects gone to tender include an expansion of the University Heights Shopping Centre, additions to the Fairfield Shopping Plaza and and expansion of the Queen Alexandra Hospital.

City men charged with murder try on hospital patient

Two Victoria men have been charged with attempted murder following an attack upon a patient at Victoria General Hospital Sunday night.

William Lloyd Christie, 44, and William Richard Johnson, 34, appeared Monday before Judge Fred Green and were remanded to Jan. 2 on joint charges of attempted murder and possession of a weapon dangerous to the public peace.

The charges arose out of an incident Sunday when patient Terry Adams was attacked with a length of pipe.

Adams suffered multiple cuts to his head, arms and chest.

He was discharged from hospital Wednesday.

Tree lights blamed for $17,000 blaze

Faulty Christmas tree lights are blamed for a fire on Wednesday that caused $17,000 damage to a house at 1431 Pembroke.

Occupants Mr. and Mrs. G.A. Dixson were not at home when the fire was spotted by a neighbor at 6:29 p.m.

Victoria deputy fire chief Mike Heppell said firemen kept the blaze from spreading beyond the living room but there was extensive smoke damage throughout the single-storey house.

Heppell said there was about $15,000 damage done to the building and contents loss has been put at $2,000.

In another fire shortly before noon Wednesday about $9,000 damage was done when a fire broke out in a shed at 1611 Myrtle and spread to a garage next door.

Heppell said the fire started in a box of hot ashes that had been placed in the shed by owner H.B. Duke.

Flames spread to the garage owned by Phyllis Pye.

The loss in each case was put at $4,500.

There was only one traffic accident that resulted in serious injury over the Christmas holiday.

City police said Rudolph Hoffman, 78, of 102-954 Dingley Dell suffered a crushed left arm Wednesday afternoon when he fell under the wheels of a B.C. Hydro bus that was pulling into the bus stop in front of 726 Yates.

He is in satisfactory condition in Victoria General Hospital.

The driver of the bus was Frank Chevrier, 43, of 305-105 Gorge Road East.

A-G's offices open

The ministry of the attorney-general was open for business on Monday.

Director of personnel Peter Clark said today all ministry offices were staffed on the day before Christmas.

The Times reported Monday that a 9 a.m. check showed the attorney-general's ministry was closed.

Although most government offices were open Monday, many desks were empty. The employees used holidays of accumulated overtime to stretch out the Christmas break.

'I doubt you will ever return to this country'

A 35-year-old American has been given a nominal one day in jail by county court Judge E.J.C. Stewart who said the man has been punished enough by spending almost 18 months in custody.

Frank Piersanti of Chicago, whose real name is Steven Cavanaugh Manning, pleaded guilty Dec. 17 to possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking.

He was among 15 men arrested July 15, 1978, when police and armed forces found 13½ tons of Colombian marijuana, said to be worth $20 million wholesale, on Obstruction Island in Shelter Inlet northwest of Tofino.

Two men pleaded guilty earlier and were sentenced to 10 years, four were found guilty by a jury last April and were sentenced to terms ranging from four to 10 years, and eight more are awaiting a non-jury trial expected to be held in the late spring.

Piersanti was to be deported to the U.S. almost immediately.

Judge Stewart said the detention order which kept Piersanti in custody was relevant to his sentencing and he also took into account the guilty plea.

He regarded the period from his re-arrest after last April's trial until Christmas Eve as a period of probably complete hopelessness for Piersanti.

No term imposed now could be lengthy.

"I doubt if you will ever return to this country even for legitimate reasons," he said. "You have been punished. Such punishment is sufficient," he said.

Piersanti was sentenced to 3½ years in New Brunswick in 1976 for possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking but only served 14 months in prison before being released on parole and deported to the U.S. One of the conditions of his parole, which lasted to this fall, was that he not return to Canada.

Stewart said the only evidence before him implicating Piersanti in what was then Canada's biggest soft-drug seizure was his arrest on a boat which was quite clearly involved and traces of marijuana on his shoes.

He noted that Piersanti was tried last April, had two charges quashed on technical grounds and found not guilty of a third charge, only to be immediately re-arrested and charged with three offences, two of them the same as the quashed counts but with the technicality overcome.

When Piersanti pleaded guilty Dec. 17, only one charge was read against him. More serious charges carrying a seven-year minimum were not presented to court.

Also in county court Monday, Judge Stewart fined Wendy Lynn Hanson, 21, $50 for possession of marijuana and $50 for possession of cannabis resin — but gave her a suspended sentence and two years probation for trafficking 1½ grams of cocaine for $175 in Oak Bay Dec. 8, 1978. She pleaded guilty to all three offences.

Judge Stewart said her age, no previous criminal record and rehabilitative efforts in the past year were sufficient not to impose jail for trafficking.

"This will give you a chance to prove you have rehabilitated yourself," he said. "If not, you will be back."

Soviets 'quit' say Canucks

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Canucks took time out from celebrating their surprising 6-2 win Wednesday night over Moscow Dynamo to call the touring Soviet Union hockey team "quitters" for their lack of enthusiasm near the end of the exhibition game.

"Ever since the Challenge Cup series last year we've been taking abuse from people about how good the Russians are compared with the National Hockey League," said Defenceman Kevin McCarthy of the Canucks. "We were down 6-0 in the last game of the Challenge Cup, but we didn't quit working.

"But when we had them down 6-2 in the third period tonight, they quit. To me, that says something about our hockey compared to theirs.

"We were down 2-0 in the first period tonight, but we didn't quit. They quit, though, and that's not right."

Quick to agree with McCarthy were team-mates Harold Snepsts, Stan Smyl and Chris Oddleifson, who thought that Dynamo's excuse of jetlag for a lacklustre third period didn't hold water.

The Canucks gave up two early goals to the Soviets, but won on the strength of three goals within 43 seconds late in the second period, two by rookie Brad Smith and a third from veteran Per-Olov Brasar, a Swede who has played the Russians more than 30 times.

The game before 16,148 fans was the first of a nine-game series involving NHL teams and the Soviet's top two teams, Dynamo and Central Red Army which plays tonight in New York against the Rangers.

Smith and Smyl both scored twice for the Canucks, with defenceman Dennis Kearns and Brasar getting the others. Vancouver was outshot 32-20 and the netminding of Curt Ridley was the difference after goals by Nikolai Varyanov and Vladimir Devyatov.

Soviet referee Andrei Zakharov drew the ire of the standing-room crowd by whistling five minor penalties against the Canucks to only one on Dynamo.

Dynamo looked its worst late in the game during a two-man advantage when several Moscow players shot the puck away in disgust when their patterned plays didn't work against the aggressive-checking Canucks.

"We didn't allow the referee to frustrate us and that helped over the long haul," said coach Harry Neale of the Canucks. "We stayed away from problems in that area and our forechecking helped stop them from breaking out quickly.

"There's a North American trait to allow strange officiating to upset you, to get you away from your game plan. But we didn't have that foolish North American thought that we could intimidate the Russians. Our poise helped us win the game."

Coach Vitali Davidov, through an interpreter, said Dynamo played its worst game of the season because the team hadn't had proper time to adjust to the time-zone change, although the Soviets arrived here Sunday night.

Vancouver has a league record of 13-15-7 this season, while Dynamo is 18-4 in the Soviet Major League.

Flyers get a fright in Hartford

By The Canadian Press

Philadelphia coach Pat Quinn says it was a close call for his National Hockey League team, as lowly Hartford Whalers nearly ended the Flyers' unbeaten streak, now at 31 games.

"This was the toughest game for us during our streak," Quinn said after the Flyers and the Whalers battled to a 4-4 tie Wednesday night on Hartford's temporary home ice.

His club, Quinn said, was "lucky to have some goaltending at the end. We were fortunate they rushed some shots."

Hartford, an expansion team inhabiting last place in the NHL's Norris Division, rebounded from a 4-2 deficit with two third-period goals. But Philadelphia goalie Phil Myre held off further assaults to preserve his team's winning streak.

"They played like we usually do, just like dogs," Quinn said of the Whalers. "They hustled all over the rink. We were very lucky. They could have won the game.

Hartford coach Don Blackburn, whose club has won just once in the last 11 games, said his team skated with intensity and that his Whalers deserved a better fate.

In other NHL action, Chicago Black Hawks and St. Louis Blues tied 3-3; Boston Bruins beat Atlanta Flames 5-3; Pittsburgh downed Detroit 6-4; Washington Capitals bombed Toronto Maple Leafs 8-2; Edmonton Oilers edged Colorado Rockies 4-3 and Minnesota North Stars whipped Winnipeg Jets 6-0.

The Flyers, who haven't lost since Oct. 13, appeared to take an insurmountable two-goal lead about three minutes into the third period when team captain Mel Bridgman scored. But a Hartford goal by Mark Howe on the very next shift cut the Philadelphia lead to 4-3.

Then, at the seven-minute mark, the Flyers misplayed the puck in their own territory. Hartford's Nick Fotiu and Greg Carroll worked the puck from behind the net to Hill and Hill slipped home the tying goals.

"I was as surprised as anyone when it went in," Hill said. The youngwinger was recalled earlier in the day from Springfield Indians of the American Hockey League, where he was the top scorer on the club.

"What a way for the kid to break in," Blackburn said.

Washington spoiled Carl Brewer's return to the NHL by bombing the Leafs behind three goals by Guy Charron and two by Paul Mulvey.

Brewer, 41, had been out of hockey for five years. He starred on defence for Toronto from 1957-65 and also played for Detroit and St. Louis.

It took the 41-year-old defenceman just 51 seconds to receive his first penalty after that 10-year absence.

It took him less time to find his sense of humor in the dressing room after the game, an 8-2 pounding by the Capitals.

"You're only as old as you feel," said Brewer, his head bald and his nose broken. "Right now I feel 84.

Brewer a former NHL all-star in the early 1960s, had approached Toronto general manager Punch Imlach, his coach and general manaer during his first stint in Toronto, about a comeback possibility after the start of the season. Imlach, dissenchanted with the play of the Leafs agreed.

"People can think what they want but it's my dream and I got it and nobody can take it away," said Brewer.

Imlach turns on Eagleson

TORONTO (CP) — Punch Imlach, Toronto Maple Leafs' general manager, is getting tired of being protrayed as Uncle Scrooge in the city's media.

Imlach issued a statement Wednesday night prior to the Leafs' National Hockey League game against Washington Capitals lambasting agent Alan Eagleson and the manner in which negotiations with goaltender Mike Palmateer have been handled.

"Mr. Alan Eagleson has been making statements regularly to the media people about his difficulties in his negotiating a contract with the Maple Leafs for Palmateer," Imlach's statement said. "My door has been open every day to both parties, but neither Palmateer nor his agent has been in my office to discuss this contract since the hockey schedule started."

Palmateer is in the option year of his contract with the Leafs. He has been reported to be seeking a raise to $200,000 a year from his current $70,000.

Negotiations between Eagleson and Imlach have made very little visible progress and Palmateer said recently that he may test the NHL free agent market next year. If the two sides cannot reach an agreement by June 1, the Toronto starting goalie becomes a free agent.

Money is no longer a problem. The problem now appears to be the buy-out clause, standard in a player's contract. The clause says that if a player is put on waivers and not claimed by another club, his employers can but out his contract for one-third of a year's pay.

Imlach said he objects to negotiation for removal of the clause from Palmateer's contract.

He noted that the players' association, with Eagleson as executive director, wanted the buy-out clause put into NHL contracts.

"It seems funny to me now that he is saying the clause is okay for the ordinary members of the association — but for all the players that retain him personally as an agent, it is not a good deal and they should not sign," Imlach's statement said.

He suggested that Eagleson was falling into a conflict-of-interest situation.

Imlach refused to expand on his statement after it was released. He said he didn't want to negotiate Palamteer's contract through the media.

TIGER SANDWICH is manufactured by goalie Rollie Boutin and defenceman Pierre Bouchard of Washington Capitals as they put squeeze on Dave (Tiger) Williams during National Hockey League game Wednesday night in Toronto. Capitals had Maple Leafs in squeeze most of way and breezed to 8-2 victory.

'Good things' finally falling Bruins' way

The Cougars have had New Westminster Bruins' number but Victoria coach Jack Shupe can count three reasons to fear a change as the Western Hockey League rivals prepare for tonight's meeting in Memorial Arena.

The Cougars are 6-0 against New Westminster so far, and that has helped Victoria maintain a season-long hold on first place in the Western Division.

The home-ice advantage is Victoria's tonight but Shupe detects, with a certain degree of anxiety, some blessings falling into New Westminster's corner.

Firstly, Shupe is worried about the adverse effect that holiday inactivity may have on his team.

The Cougars have skated only once in seven days. The only skate was a league game in Portland last Saturday, which the Cougars lost 7-3.

Cougars were given time off for Christmas and were to practice Wednesday but ice was not available because of a rock show at Memorial Arena.

Second on the list of concerns are New Westminster's "Black Aces" — the four players who could not play in any league game because of a court-ordered suspension imposed last summer. The four — Boris Fistric, Rick Amann, Rob Roflick and Bill Hobbins — have helped establish stability, especially on defence, to the cellar-dwelling Bruins.

The game tonight is the first for the Black Aces in Memorial Arena.

And the third benefit, albeit an unproven one, is the addition of three newcomers. New Westminster coach Ernie McLean has drafted former Cougar Brad Yachimec, Oren Koules and John Winter from the disbanded Great Falls Americans.

Koules and Yachimec are expected to add scoring punch that has been missing. Yachimec has scored 12 goals and 13 assists in 37 games, including a 3-4 showing in his 12 games as a Cougar. Koules has nine goals and 11 assists in 26 games with Great Falls.

Cougars then will have a day to prepare for Saturday's visit by the Czechoslovakian national junior team, the first of eight scheduled by the Czechs against WHL and B.C. Junior League opposition.

In the only WHL game played during the Christmas period, former Victorian Gary Slezak and Kelly Kisio each scored twice as the Eastern Division-leading Calgary Wranglers thumped Lethbridge Broncos 8-3 before a crowd of 4,139 in Calgary Wednesday.

Woman jockey first to win sweeps race

LEOPARDSTOWN, Ireland (AP) — Irian, a 25-1 outsider, led from start to finish Thursday and won the two-mile Irish Sweeps handicap hurdle.

Irian, ridden by Anne Ferris — the only woman jockey in the race — held off a late challenge from Twinburn to win by a head.

The winner earned about $41,000 (U.S.) for owner R. Keogh and made about $220,000 (U.S.) for three holders of Irish Sweeps tickets.

Second-placed Twinburn, ridden by Tommy Quinn, was 6-1 co-favorite, and finished well clear of third-place finisher Chinrullah, 8-1, and Deep Gale, 6-1 co-favorite, who was fourth.

Ferris was the first woman to ride a Sweeps Hurdle winner and the first woman to win such a valuable race in Europe.

Chinrullah, winnner of last year's race, rallied to take third place from the fading Deep Gale.

Busy schedule ahead for Bid

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — Spectacular Bid, a loser to Affirmed in their only meeting, will be following in the footsteps of the 1979 Eclipse Award winner in the Santa Anita winter meeting that began Wednesday.

The Bud Delp-trained Spectacular Bid will make his California racing debut in the $75,000 Malibu Stakes at seven furlongs on Jan. 5. In last year's edition of the Malibu, Affirmed ran third behind Little Reb and Radar Ahead.

On Jan. 19, Spectacular Bid will go in the 1 1-8 mile San Fernando Stakes, a race in which Affirmed finished second to Radar Ahead last January.

Spectacular Bid, winner of the 1979 Kentucky Derby and Preakness, will also [illegible] the $200,000 Strub Stakes at 1¼ miles Feb. 3, the $350,000 Santa Anita Handicap at 1¼ miles March 2, and then go to Hollywood Park for the Californian, the Gold Cup, and maybe another race.

"We have possibly 10 or 11 races planned for him this coming year before he retires," said Delp.

Affirmed, who won the Triple Crown in 1978, beat Spectacular Bid by less than a length in their Oct. 6 meeting in the Jockey Club Gold Cup in New York. Soon afterward, trainer Laz Barrera announced Affirmed's retirement.

Spectacular Bid will enter the Santa Anita meeting as thoroughbred racing's top active money-winner, and can knock Affirmed off the top of the money-winning list with a successful campaign. Affirmed won $2,393,818, while Spectacular Bid — now fifth on the all-time list — has earned $1,663,817.

Yvon Joly, Sean Simpson, Dino Ciccarelli, Bill Gardner and Terry Bovair scored for Peterborough.

The tournament opens tonight with Canada playing Finland.

Houston will suffer if stars can't play

The Associated Press

The eyes of Texas are upon Houston Oilers' training room and Roger Staubach's National Football League future.

Three regular patrons with the Oilers' doctors make up most of the team's offence: all-pro running back Earl Campbell, quarterback Dan Pastorini and wide receiver Ken Burrough. They all are listed as doubtful starters with groin injuries for Houston's American Football Conference playoff game at San Diego on Saturday. They were hurt in Houston's 13-7 playoff triumph over Denver Chargers last Sunday.

If all three are sidelined, the AFC West champion Chargers will be heavy favorites over the wild-card Oilers.

The Cowboys may need to be concerned with something far more permanent — Staubach's retirement although the ace signal-caller has said he won't decide until next spring whether to return for the 1980 season.

"If we are fortunate to go to the Super Bowl," said Cowboys' coach Tom Landry, whose National Conference East champions are preparing for a Sunday contest against NFC West titlist Los Angeles Rams, "he might quit this year. Roger has pride and he'll never let himself get over the hill. He'll play as long as he feels he can do the job."

Staubach did such a good job this season that he led the NFL's passing efficiency ratings. But Landry acknowledges that his quarterback has reached the age where all the skills can disappear . . . "and it happens all at once.

"But I think he should play another year. He is having one of his best years and he really put us into the division championship."

The Cowboys manhandled the Rams 30-6 Oct. 14 at Texas Stadium, where Sunday's game will be played. Staubach had one of his best games ever in the 1975 NFC championship against the Rams, completing 16 of 26 passes for 220 yards and four touchdowns in a 37-7 victory.

Dallas may have to carry the hopes of the Lone Star state for a Super Bowl contender if Campbell, Pastorini and Burrough are unable to play against the Chargers, who — along with Pittsburgh Steelers — had a 12-4 record, tops in the NFL.

Oilers' coach Bum Phillips isn't giving up on his star trio, although he has faith in their substitutes. Of backup quarterback Gifford Nielsen, Phillips said:

"He's showed me every time he's been in a game that he's capable of starting in this league."

Rob Carpenter would replace Campbell, Rich Caster and Guido Merkens probably would take over for Burrough.

The other Saturday game pits wild-card Philadelphia Eagles, which beat Chicago Bears 27-17 last Sunday, at Tampa Bay Bucaners. On Sunday, defending Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh entertains Miami Dolphins.

The Steelers will be hurt by all-pro linebacker Jack Ham's absence with an ankle injury but that doesn't change Dolphins' coach Don Shula's outlook.

"You go down the roster both ways and they're deep," said Shula. "They've got experienced players backing up every position."

Lupien, Ruel at odds as coach cracks whip

MONTREAL (CP) — Defenceman Gilles Lupien of Montreal Canadiens isn't among those filled with good cheer in this festive season.

The 25-year-old Lupien, who expressed a desire to be traded from the National Hockey League club earlier this year, may have hastened his departure after a heated discussion with coach Claude Ruel during the Canadiens practice Monday.

Lupien poured out his feelings after Ruel took him aside at one point in the practice and said that he was not pleased with Lupien's attitude, and that he would have to do better if he wanted to earn a full-time spot on the roster.

"I told him to leave the ice and to come to my office after practice," Ruel said following Lupien's outburst in front of the other players.

"He has some problems and I wanted to discuss them with him with Irving Grundman (managing director of the team) there as well."

Lupien showered quickly and did not appear for the meeting, and Ruel indicated he will take the next few days to ponder the situation.

"I have 21 players here and I'd like to play them all," said Ruel, "but the rule book prevents me from choosing more than 17. It's one of the most difficult things for a coach to tell a guy who's worked hard and is ready that he's not playing that night."

Lupien feels that he has earned the right to play regularly, or at least be told the reason why he cannot.

He was one of the team's most effective rearguards during the Canadiens disastrous road trip to Edmonton and Winnipeg in mid-December, but has played just one shift in the last two games.

Hawley rides 'Cap winner

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — Jockey Sandy Hawley took Beau's Eagle to the front early and kept him there all the way Wednesday for an easy victory in the $55,250 Palos Verdes Handicap on opening day of the Santa Anita meet.

[illegible]ying 122 pounds in the six-furlong race for all ages, favored Beau's Eagle took command in the opening quarter-mile and was four lengths ahead of Always Gallant at the wire.

. . . appreciative winner

Bill Hobbis made note of a difference of 85 while one was enough for Pat Derry when they claimed low gross honors in the 21st Christmas Tree tournament Wednesday at Uplands Golf Club.

Hobbis, a former Victorian who now lives in Calgary, scored a nifty, one-over-par 71 to top a men's field of 98. He finished one shot ahead of Colwood's Jim Clapp.

Derry, a member at Colwood, came in with an 85 to lead the field of 10 women. In becoming only the second woman to score successive victories, the blonde Derry improved on last year's round by one stroke — and that was her margin of victory over Bea Breffitt of the host club.

Joan Lawson of Uplands holds the record with successive victories from 1960 to 1962.

Breffitt, however, still earned a major award, capturing the women's handicap title by scoring 87-11 — 76. Bea won on a countback over Corinne Floyd, who finished with 88-12 — 76. Corinne, a Prince Rupert resident who still retains membership at Colwood, was third in the low gross chase.

Shirley Roberts of Gorge Vale (78) finished third in the women's net race while Kay Rickinson of Colwood (80) was fourth.

Gil Wong of Gorge Vale was the day's other major winner. He won the men's handicap trophy with a sparkling 87-24 — 63, the second lowest net total ever recorded in Canada's only major Christmas tournament but still five shots off the record 58 posted by Glen Meadows' Mike Ruddy in 1974.

Wong finished two shots ahead of Victoria Club's Dave Ellis, 80-15 — 65, and three ahead of Uplands veteran Wally Jeanes, 88-22 — 66.

Hobbis, a former member of two B.C. Willingdon Cup teams, was ecstatic over course and weather conditions. The excellent weather — without wind and temperatures in the 50s — helped swell the original starting field by 15.

"It was 30 below (fahrenheit) when I left Calgary," said Hobbis, "and today it was 55 above."

A difference of 85.

"No one can complain," added Hobbis, who finished in a tie for first with Dave Donaldson of Gorge Vale in 1976 but lost in a playoff. "The greens were great."

The one-time Cedar Hill member expressed his delight in a more tangible way than verbally at the prize-giving ceremony. After accepting the winner's prize script, he graciously donated it to Uplands' junior development program.

China discovers jogging 'to recover youthful vigor'

PEKING (AP) — China's sports newspaper has expounded on the benefits of jogging to keep fit, especially for older people to "recover their youthful vigor," and offered hints on how to get started.

The hints include taking care when jogging on the street to avoid collisions with cars, bicycles or pedestrians.

The Sports News said Wednesday jogging can help people in their 70s maintain the heart functions of someone 45 to 50 and the respiratory functions of someone 40.

Jogging is not popular in China, where many on the farms still do heavy manual labor. But the paper warned those with desk jobs of the lack of exercise.

The paper suggested starting with only five minutes of running every other day and working up gradually to perhaps 30 minutes a day. The only way to benefit, it added, was to keep it up faithfully to build a stronger physique "and contribute more to the four modernizations," China's ambitious program to become a modern power by the year 2000.

Joint Korea team proposed

TOKYO (AP) — North Korea said Wednesday it will deliver to South Korea a letter of proposal for holding talks on sending a joint Korean team to the 1980 Moscow Olympic Games, Pyongyang radio reported.

A statement issued by the spokesman of the North Korean Olympic Committee asked the South Korean side to send two officials to the truce village of Panmunjom on Thursday to receive the letter, said the Korean-language broadcast monitored here.

The North Korean Olympic Committee proposed last Thursday holding talks with South Koreans on forming "a joint sports team of the North and the South and participate in the forthcoming 22nd Olympic Games as a single national team."

HAPPY BLUE YEAR!

Pitt kicker most valuable

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — University of Pittsburgh kicker Mark Schubert said it was a thrill to be named the Fiesta Bowl's most valuable offensive player, but thought it might mean even more to his parents.

"I hadn't done any Christmas shopping out here and this is going to be my present to my parents," said Schubert, who sandwiched a 36-yard field goal between a pair of 46-yarders as the 10th-ranked Panthers defeated the University of Arizona 16-10 on Christmas Day.

Dan Marino, Pitt's freshman quarterback, hit tight end Benjie Pryor on a 12-yard scoring pass in the third quarter for the Panthers only touchdown in the contest, played before a crowd of 55,347 at Sun Devil Stadium.

Schubert's first field goal came with 10 seconds remaining in the opening quarter.

"You know, it was a funny thing about that," said Schubert, a senior who led the Panthers in scoring this season."A friend of my girlfriend's mother has been sick and in the hospital, and I said, 'I'm going to kick it for this lady.'

Marino, who completed 15 of 29 passes for 172 yards while givin up two interceptions, said Pitt had been helped greatly by Schubert all year. "In fact, we may have won this game because of him — because of his consistency," he added.

Pittsburgh, making its fourth straight bowl appearance, ended the season with an 11-1 record and a 10-game victory streak.

Arizona strong safety Dave Liggins, the Fiesta Bowl's most valuable defensive player, picked off two Pitt passes, had one pass deflection and was credited with three unassisted and four assisted tackles.

"That trophy was on the back of my mind since Monday when I saw it," said Liggins. "I think defensively, we showed people we can play football. We never gave up. It was our best defensive effort of the year."

"We've been underestimated all year long but we can play with anybody," said Tony Mason, Arizona's head coach. "That was a good football team out there, and I thought we should have won.

The Wildcats moved into position to make a game-tying field goal later in the quarter. But faced with a fourth-and-two play from the Pitt 21, the Wildcats elected to go for the first down. They failed by inches on a run by Larry Heater.

Pitt then turned around and put together an 80-yard march which culminated with Pryor's touchdown reception.

Blue downs Gray

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Harvard Coach Joe Restic says two fourth-quarter plays were the keys to his team's 22-13 victory Christmas Day in the 42nd Blue-Gray college all-star football game.

The first of the two came just as the quarter started when the Gray, down 14-13, faced a fourth down at the Blue 30-yard line and decided to go for it rather than try a field goal.

But the Blue defence stopped Rice's Earl Cooper for a one-yard gain, leaving the Gray two yards short of the needed first down.

Restic said the play was the turning point of the game, but he also cited a safety scored by the Blue team minutes later as "a big factor in our victory."

Rockets Break out, snap losing streak

By The Associated Press

Houston Rockets' owner wants to see his team take off — soon. It may already have done so if it had kept Mike Newlin.

The Rockets, tied for fourth in the National Basketball Association's Central Division, broke a six-game losing streak by pelting cross-state rival San Antonio Spurs 143-110 Wednesday night. The victory came on the heels of team owner George Maloof's indictment of his club for its "negative approach."

Had the Rockets' held onto Newlin rather than deal him to New Jersey early in the season, they might be challenging Atlanta Hawks for the top spot in the division. Newlin has been on a scoring streak that saw him net 52 points 10 days ago and add another 37 Wednesday as the Nets beat Washington Bullets 116-104.

Calvin Murphy led Houston with 29 points while Moses Malone added 27 and Rick Barry 21.

"I think we played with more intensity and with a better attitude tonight," said Barry. "We all realized if we pull together we could win. We played together as a team tonight."

Elsewhere, Kansas City Kings beat Los Angeles Lakers 118-111; Indiana Pacers edged Detroit Pistons 98-97; Milwaukee Bucks beat Chicago Bulls 110-101; Denver Nuggets stopped Golden State Warriors 99-94; Phoenix Suns bombed Portland Trail Blazers 119-99, and Seattle SuperSoncs coasted past San Diego Clippers 124-104.

Kings 118 Lakers 111

Sam Lacey dominated the boards with 21 rebounds and scored 18 points. The Kings rallied from a 15-point deficit in the third quarter. Jamaal Wilkes and Earvin (Magic) Johnson each had 24 each for Los Angeles.

Pacers 98 Pistons 97

Detroit lost its eighth consecutive game when Mickey Johnson hit a pair of free throws for the decisive points. Alex English led the Pacers with 21 points while Bob Lanier had 24 for the Pistons.

SuperSonics 124 Clippers 104

A 14-point spree by Dennis Johnson in the third quarter paced Seattle.

Bucks 110 Bulls 101

Junior Bridgeman scored 12 of his 23 points in the final quarter and Marques Johnson also had 23 for the Bucks. Reggie Theus had 21 points for Chicago.

Nuggets 99 Warriors 94

Dan Issel poured in 39 points for the Nuggets.

Suns 119 Trail Blazers 99

Phoenix won its 12th straight game, riding balanced scoring that saw Len Robinson hit for 21 points, Paul Westphal for 20, Walter Davis for 19 and Mike Bratz for 14.

SKATE MEET ERASED

KEYSTONE, Colo. (AP) — The 1980 world sprint speedskating championships scheduled Feb. 9 and 10 have been cancelled.

McGinnis to serve six games

NEW YORK (AP) — George McGinnis of Denver Nuggets began a six-day suspension Wednesday after National Basketball Association commissioner Lawrence F. O'Brien reduced his original 10-day sentence for running into referee Jess Kersey.

In a two-page statement, O'Brien said McGinnis had withdrawn his request for a hearing on the matter and "acknowledged his failure to exercise sufficient care to avoid the collision."

Originally, McGinnis had appealled his suspension and a hearing had been set for Thursday.

McGinnis will miss three games during the supension, sitting out contests against Golden State Warriors Wednesday night, Detroit Pistons Friday and Cleveland Cavaliers on Saturday. The suspension without pay will cost him between $14,000 and $15,000 in lost salary.

The collision occurred in the fourth quarter of Denver's game in Seattle on Dec. 16. Kersey was knocked to the floor, suffering a mild concussion.

"There is a difference of opinion concerning the circumstances of the collision," O'Brien said. "The reports filed by the NBA's official observer assigned to the game as well as others, including members of the King County police department assigned to the game's security force, state that the collision was not accidental. Other witnesses, including two Seattle fans, who, of their own volition, called the NBA office, stated that the collision was accidental."

O'Brien said he had conferred with McGinnis.

"He reiterated to me his honest belief that he did not intend to make contact with or harm referee Kersey and that he is truly sorry that any njury may have been caused by the collision," the commissioner said. "Nevertheless, Mr. McGinnis and I agreed that, under the circumstances, he did not exercise the degree of care necessary to avoid a collision."

Liverpool blanks United to take command of first

LONDON (AP) — Liverpool overpowered Manchester United 2-0 at Anfield on Wednesday to take a firm grip on the First Division lead in the English League's soccer standings.

Liverpool moved two points ahead of second-placed United with a game in hand.

Defender Alan Hansen got Liverpool off to a good start, firing a pass from Ray Kennedy past goalie Gary Bailey after 15 minutes of play.

Although Liverpool's dominance of the match was total, a series of fine saves by Bailey kept Manchester in the match until the 86th minute when David Johnson struck home a Phil Neale cross to clinch the game.

Arsenal stayed in third place, six poits behind Liverpool, after an Alan Sunderland goal earned a 1-0 win over North London rival, Tottenham Hotspur.

Nottingham Forest's losing streak ended when goals from John Robertson and Stan Bowles sank Aston Villa. Bowles, making his home debut, scored shortly before Gary Shaw netted a 65th-minute consolation goal for Villa.

Crystal Palace, unbeaten in nine previous meetings with lowly Brighton, slumped to a 3-0 defeat. Peter Ward inspired Brighton, scoring once with other goals by Brian Horton and Gerry Ryan.

Norwich and Ipswich shared six goals in a thrilling 3-3 draw. Eric Gates put Ipswich ahead after five minutes, but goals by Alan Taylor and Peter Mendham gave Norwich the half-time lead. Arnold Murhen and John Wark put Ipswich back in front, but Taylor scored up a late second goal to give Norwich a point.

Manchester City came close to earning both points against Stoke, but had to settle for a 1-1 draw when Tommy Caton's late effort rebounded off the goalpost. Alan Dodd gave Stoke a fourth-minute lead but Paul Power tied the game 12 minutes later.

Middlesbrough ended Leeds United's fine run when Bosco Jancovic scored twice in a 3-1 home win. David Armstrong got Middlesbrough's other goal while Wayne Entwistle was on target for Leeds.

In a Scottish FA Cup first-round replay, Queen of the South blanked Falkirk 4-0. In a first-round, second replay, Brechin beat East Stirling 1-0

Keegan Europe's best

PARIS (Reuter) — Kevin Keegan, the British star who plays for Hamburg of West Germany, was named European footballer-of-the-year for the second consecutive time.

The international judges, voting for the magazine France Football obviously found the 28-year-old former Liverpool star in a league of his own, giving him 118 votes out of a possible 130.

Keegan, who joined Hamburg in 1977, is only the second person to win the player of the year honor two times running. Dutch star Johan Cruyff won in 1973 and 1974, after taking the award for the first time in 1971.

Runnerup in the 1979 voting was West German Karl Rummenigge, who plays for Bayern Munich. Ruud Krol of the Netherlands, who plays for Ajax, was third.

. . . A few words about the good old un-decade

By HENRY ALLEN
Washington Post

It was called the lost decade, the un-decade, or the decade that got away. Fittingly, some of its greatest moments never happened. They are history, nonetheless.

The cosmic pattern was set in late 1973, when the comet Kohoutek was to light our night skies, portend the Second Coming, cause rains of frogs and who knows what all. It never really showed.

The same year, the Guru Maharaj Ji rented the Houston Astrodome for a rally, setting aside parking-lot space for flying saucers. They didn't show. So didn't 80,000 of the up-to-100,000 people the 15-year-old Perfect Master had expected.

In 1974, Richard Nixon didn't finish his term as president, one of the reasons being 18 minutes of silence on subpoenaed tapes of Oval Office conversations. Then Gerald Ford checked into the White House to give us WIN buttons (for Whip Inflation Now). Nobody wore them. Inflation sailed along merrily.

In 1976 we had the great swine flu non-epidemic. Civilization did not crumble before a menace called Eurocommunism (though it did tremble at the shutdown of the last assembly line for Cadillac convertibles).

The decade rang with predictions that California would slide into the ocean for its sins. But the San Andreas fault — which came to be discussed as if it were a tragic flaw rather than a bit of geology — continued to slumber. Granted, a 1972 quake killed 62 in Los Angeles, but it was so much less than the cataclysm that was predicted that it's been virtually forgotten.

Other great non-events of the 1970s: Billy Beer, mood rings, pet rocks, Perrier water, the toilet-paper shortage, and the reuniting of the Beatles.

Lest we forget

Let's not forget amusements such as a pie in the face of Jerry Brown; Fanne Foxe in the Tidal Basin and Wilbur Mills up the creek; two uncommonly honest presidents in the White House; Sugar Ray Leonard in the ring; record crowds at the King Tut exhibit; women at Annalpolis; everybody in the habit of saying "Have a nice day," which became "Have a good one," by decade's end; Liz Ray on the congressional payroll; Wayne Hays off it.

Everybody died

Not just Harry S. Truman, Janis Joplin, Charles Lindbergh, Duke Ellington, Pablo Picasso, Margaret Mead, Mao Tse-tung and John Wayne.

Everybody.

You remember Everybody. You used to read about Everybody in Life magazine and the Saturday Evening Post. Everybody thought the president was honest, knew the dollar would never be devalued, swiveled around inside hula hoops, admired J. Edgar Hoover and thought a woman's place was in the home.

Everybody didn't like something, but nobody didn't like Sara Lee.

Everybody was a media confection, of course, but Everybody had also become an article of faith.

By the mid-'70s, Everybody was brain dead, a gork, as they say in hospitals right before they pull the plug.

Nevertheless, Nixon looked for retinal contractions in the Silent Majority, and the media monitored fibrillations such as roller-skating, disco and vans.

If you listened to all the voices telling you about Everybody, you got the idea that the male of the species was a gay macho urban cowboy ecologist dangling from a hang flider and talking about impotence on a CB radio.

Everybody may have wanted happy-ending movies like Rocky and Breaking Away, But Everybody also wanted horror and disaster as in The Exorcist, Alien, Jaws, and The Towering Inferno. How could Everybody listen to both the funky brooding of the Eagles, and the nastiness of punk rock?

Social critics such as Christopher Lasch finally pulled the plug by insisting that we were a nation of narcissists who cared about nobody but ourselves. But in our darkest hour of mourning, a savior appeared, and seems to be reincarnating Everybody. At last, Everybody doesn't like something — and it's Ayatollah Khomeini.

Beat goes on

In December 1969, we had Altamont, where the Rolling Stones, the Hell's Angels and a fatal stabbing combined to ensmog rock in bad vibes.

But then we got James Taylor playing soft rock, Deep Purple playing heavy metal, David Bowie playing from somewhere in Space, Leon Redbone, Randy Newman, Dr. Hook and Kiss playing around. We got disco. We got Tequila sunrise with the Eagles, sweet and sour with Fleetwood Mac.

But then, precisely 10 years after Altamont, we got 11 people crushed to death at a Who concert in Cincinnati.

Body fashion

Forget about fashion, as in clothing. The big fashion story of the '70s was bodies, especially men's bodies.

Early in the decade, women leaped out of the closets of modesty to proclaim an interest in — yes, obsession with — male anatomy.

The low-rent way of flaunting one's liberation was to buy Playgirl or Viva magazine and admire the frontal male nudes. Far more chic, however, was to grit one's teeth with lust while admiring the ne-plus-ultra curvature of a tushie belonging to Rudolf Nureyev, generally agreed to be the greatest male ballet dancer in the world.

Tushies! Previously, the ideal male was the football mesomorph, with about as much curviliner defination as a refrigerator. Suddenly, jogging hit, and the ideal male was supposed to have legs knotted up like shillelaghs, a chest like a sweating xylopho and a face appropriate for modeling one of the ..tter stations of the cross.

Feminine body-styles followed Laver's Laws, as put forth in Modesty and Dress, by the late British historian James Laver.

"There is a curious fact of social history . . . that the disappearance of corsets is always accompanied by two related phenomena — promiscuity and an inflated currency."

Morals could hardly have been looser, nor inflation higher.

By 1979, the Waist was restored to . . . the waist.

And women, who were supposed to have tushies as tidy as Nureyev's in 1970, were buying padded panties — funny falsies — in 1979.

Lest we forget

Red dye No. 2, the snail darter, the furbish lousewort, saccharin, all those cancerous laboratory rats, laetrile, "If you've seen one redwood you've seen them all," Smokenders, the ozone shield, vinyl chloride, Three Mile Island, Save the Whales, "I Brake for Small Animals," been sprouts, megavitamins.

Happiness

A lot of Americans seemed to have a burr under the psychic saddle. In the '70s they took a cue from the burgeoning abortion lobby and began to talk as if happiness-on-demand were a God-given right.

Like most Americans they thought it was a question of tools and technique. They turned to: Tai chi, Rolfing, assertiveness training, encounter groups, primal screaming, Transcendental Meditation, Buddhist chanting and neo-revivalist organizations such as est, run by a former encylopedia salesman who will no doubt be the only person in history ever to change his name to Werner Erhard.

It all seemed to start on the West Coast, where people even invented a jargon to talk about it all: "getting it" and "sharing space" and so on. Get it? I hear you.

The American Psychiatric Association did its part. It announced that homosexuality was not an illness, and it jettisoned the concept of "neurosis," as abruptly as Vokswagen dropped the Beettle from its production line.

Mararishi Mahesh Yogi held a flower and giggled on the Merv Griffin show. His way to bliss involved sitting with eyes closed 40 minutes a day and thinking a mantra.

Charismatic ministries won converts to Jesus.

The bliss game turned ugly, as it always does. Parents charged the Rev. Sun Myung Moon and a host of others with brainwashing their children. Then there was Rev. Jim Jones, Jonestown and Kool-Aid mixed with cyanide.

By 1979, a lot of people who'd looked for The Answer to unhappiness decided they'd been asking The Wrong Question.

The marketplace

Conspicuous consumption took strange turns in the hands of the ruling classes. Instead of flaunting their wealth with jewels and swimming pools, they created poverty chic.

They went berserk tearing the plaster off their walls to expose the beams, threw away worsted for riveted cotton denims, tore up front lawns to plant corn and spent thousands on what had hitherto been the badge of grinding poverty: the wood stove.

One no longer took out the garbage. One composted it. Raccoons loved poverty chic. Farmers stopped burning their tumble-down barns when they found that poverty sheiks would pay twice as much for old, weathered lumber as for new.

One no longer bought a little summer place. One bought a whole farm, preferably in some leached-out county in Maine. Pickup trucks had highest prestige, followed by the Volvo station wagon or an old Mercedes diesel, the older the better.

One read "Small Is Beautiful," by E.F. Schumacher and tried to take it in stride when Schumacher's advance men, shortly before his death, hired the entire Cow Palace in San Francisco so all his fans could hear him speak.

Fun couples

Fun couples were everywhere. Most conspicuous were gay males, who after early insistence on holding hands whenever the media were around, settled into domesticity as bland as anyone else's.

Fashionable straights lived together — it was the '70s equivalent of going steady in the '50s, except that it was not supposed to lead to marriage — marriage being a cramp in one's life style, a stunting of personal growth and a narrowing of options.

Opening lead — jack of clubs.

There are times when declarer must make what appears to be a silly play in order to give himself the maximum chance for the contract. The play may seem senseless if it turns out to be unnecessary, but when the play turns out to be essential the declarer has something worth talking about.

Here is an example of such a play where West leads a club against four hearts. Declarer wins in dummy with the ace, returns a low trump, and finesses the jack! The finesse seems absurd when you consider that South is gazing at ten trumps headed by the A-K-J. But, oddly enough, it is the right play — not because the finesse succeeds in the actual deal, but because it assures the contract beyond the shadow of a doubt.

To appreciate the advantage of the finesse, let's assume that declarer makes the more normal play of the ace. With West showing out of trumps, South must now go down one against proper defense. He loses one trick in each suit.

Let's now assume that when South finesses the jack it loses to West's queen. This is not cause for alarm, because the contract is still fully under control. The best the defenders can do in that case is cash a club and lead a diamond.

South wins the diamond return, draws the only missing trump, and plays the king of spades. West takes his ace, but it is the end of the road for the defense. South later enters dummy with a trump to the nine and discards his diamond loser on the queen of spades.

In effect, the trump finesse is a safety play to guard against a 3-0 trump division. Quite often it will cost declarer a 30-point trick, but that is a mighty small premium to pay for insuring a contract.

Dramatic '54 operation opened medical vistas

By HAROLD M. SCHMECK
New York Times

NEW YORK — Twenty-five years ago, a young Massachusetts man who was near death received from his twin brother one of the strangest but most welcome Christmas presents ever given. It was the gift of a living kidney, accomplished through the first successful transplantation of a vital organ from one human to another. To Richard Herrick, the person who received the kidney from his brother, Ronald, it was the gift of seven more years of life. For the world at large it proved to be an even greater gift, leading to the saving of many thousands of lives and the opening of important new vistas for medical science.

Probably the greatest consequence has been a flowering of the science of immunology, which has led to successful transplantation of other human organs, new strategies against cancer and other diseases, and a far deeper understanding of the body's natural defence system in health and disease.

Two coordinated operations, to remove a kidney from the healthy twin and install it in his dying brother, were performed on Dec. 23, 1954, at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital in Boston. The team of surgeons and medical scientists of Harvard Medical School were worried about the fate of both donor and recipient. No one had ever removed a healthy kidney from a healthy person.

While the team had had some previous experience in transplanting human kidneys, these had all been taken from people who had died or required the removal for medical reasons. It amounted to putting sick kindeys into sick patients, Dr. John P. Merrill, a member of the original research team, recalled.

In these experimental transplantations, the kidneys were put in the upper leg near the groin to minimize risk and make removal easy. The transplants were viewed as last-ditch and probably temporary expedients. Taking a kidney from one twin and giving it to the other could only be justified if it were permanent. For that reason the new kidney for Mr. Herrick was put in the lower abdomen.

The earlier transplanted kidneys had never functioned very well, recalled Dr. Joseph E. Murray, who did the actual placement of the kidney in Herrick, although one had actually kept a patient alive for six months.

But sweeping scientific and social changes are still reverberating through the world because of the success of the Herrick transplant. An estimated 30,000 kidney transplants have been done since 1954, most of them during the past 10 years.

Many of the recipients have had a decade or more of added life because of the operations. The original feat also ushered in an era in other types of life-saving transplants, the most important of which were the heart, liver and bone marrow. One transplanted pancreas was successful for four years. Several lung transplants were attempted, though none successfully.

The reality of organ transplantation forced scientists and philosophers to rethink ancient definitions of life and death; helped bring about a vast flowering of the field of immunology, the realm of science concerned with immunity to disease, and an equal ferment in the technology of life-support systems, the devices that can keep the human body alive for a time when one or another of its own essential processes fails.

Development of one life-support system, the artificial kidney machine, was a crucial factor in making kidney transplantation possible. Invented by Dr. Willem Kolff in the Netherlands during World War II, the operations would have been impractical had not the artificial kidney machine been available to keep the patient in good condition while preparations were being made for the surgery.

Adaptation of the artificial kidney system for chronic long- term use — by Dr. Belding H. Scribner of the University of Washington in the early 1960s — gave otherwise doomed kidney patients an alternative to transplantation. The development also ushered in a national debate over what do do with a life-saving treatment that cost as much as $30,000 every year as long as the person lived. Its advent forced private citizens and governments to consider in an entirely new way the dollar and cents value of a human life.

Today people who would be doomed without either transplantation or regular use of the machine, have the costs of their care paid by the federal government. The yearly budget for this is about $750 million at present, and is likely to rise above $1 billion within several years.

As of mid-September, there were 52,906 men, women and children enrolled in the program. Under conditions that prevailed 10 years ago, almost all of those people would have died. Worldwide, an estimated 80,000 people are being kept alive and in reasonably good health by regular artificial kidney treatments, according to a recent article in the New England Journal of Medicine.

The scientific consequences of organ transplantation have been as sweeping as the social and economic effects.

The 1954 kidney transplant was a milestone because it proved that the key obstacle was not the difficulty of the surgery itself, but the problem of immunological rejection.

The body implacably rejects and destroys any foreign tissue. The transplantation between the Herrick brothers dodged this problem because they were identical twins and therefore so close genetically that they could accept each other's tissues. The operation proved what had been suspected, but not previously demonstrated — that gifts of vital organs would be practical if some means could be found to overcome immunological rejection.

The same Harvard research team drove that point home in 1959 when the members successfully transplanted a kidney from one fraternal twin to his brother even though the two were not genetically identical. The feat was accomplished by subduing the patient's immunological defenses by heavy doses of X-rays. Later it was discovered that the job could be done better by using drugs. Even today, organ transplantation remains only a partial success, because the immunological problem has never been completely solved.

New West Bank clashes revive fears of violence

By WILLIAM CLAIBORNE
Washington Post

RAMALLAH, Occupied West Bank — A sudden and unexpected upturn in the frequency of disturbances in the West Bank this month has led to growing concern among Israeli military authorities and moderate Palestinians that the new year could usher in an escalating level of violence just as peace negotiations reach a critical stage.

Each side, predictably, blames the other for igniting the clashes that have swept through the West Bank after a hiatus of relative calm that lasted through the summer and fall.

Officials at the military governor's headquarters here say that the recent wave of disturbances is just the prelude of a carefully orchestrated campaign by extremist Palestinian political leaders — guided by the Palestine Liberation Organization — to provoke Israeli army occupation units into harsh reprisals. The army's response, it is felt, would provide a rallying point for ideologicaly diverse Palestinians, while at the same time generating empathy abroad for the nationalist cause.

Sources in the military said several radical West Bank mayors and members of a subrosa nationalist group called the National Guidance Committee met secretly last week in east Jerusalem and decided to concentrate their efforts on promoting demonstrations against Jewish civilian settlements and the expropiation of Arab-owned land.

Those popular issues, it was said, were picked as targets over the Camp David peace accords and the proposed West Bank autonomy plan because they would obligate even the most moderate Palestinians to support the protests.

For their part, Palestinian leaders say the clashes have been instigated by the military command to dissipate growing Arab unity in the West Bank and Gaza Strip and have been calculated to dispirit the anti-autonomy movement. The ultimate goal of the Israeli government, the West Bank political figures say, is to impose limited self-rule by stifling Arab dissent against it.

West Bank Arabs also complain that the army has been abetted by ultranationalist Israeli civilian settlers who have formed vigilante squads to raid Arab villages in reprisal for rock-throwing attacks on Jewish-owned vehicles.

Whether by conspiracy or by chance, the pattern of unrest in the West Bank and the level of anxiety and tension shown by those caught up in the spiral is unmistakable. Some examples:

—An official of Bir Zeit university walks into an afternoon Arab tea party in east Jerusalem and, to the astonishment of the guests, throws a bagful of expended teargas cannisters and rifle cartridge casings onto the floor. In excited tones, he describes one of two violent clashes at the Arab university between militant students and Israeli soldiers, in which 13 students were arrested.

—The mayor of the village of Halhoul, near Hebron, confides to foreign reporters that he is afraid for his life because of reports that Israeli civilian vigilantes from the Kiryat Arba settlement have vowed to kill him. His only protection, Mayor Muhammed Milhem says, is to make the threat public and hope the notiriety will deter the alleged avengers. Earlier in the week, in retribution for stone-throwing by Halhoul teenagers, a group of Kiryat Arba ultranationalists burst into a village store and beat up the owner and a local mukhtor.

—When youths from the Jalazoun refugee camp, north of here, shower rocks on Israeli schoolchildren passing in a bus, injuring two, a group of armed settlers from Shiloh enter a girls' school and smash windows and laboratory equipment. Several days later, after another rock-throwing incident, the settlers return to the school and abduct a student, taking her to the military headquarters for questioning.

—Security forces fire teargas and warning shots in Beit Ummar to break up a symbolic funeral procession of 1,000 Arabs mourning a local-born PLO official who was assassinated in Cyprus. The gunshots ring out after tires are burned and rocks are thrown by Beit Ummar youths.

Despite the pat accusations being hurled publicly by both sides as to the cause of the renewed violence — the first serious outbreaks since last spring — they appear to stem from a collision of complex political crosscurrents that have been building up for months, according to a composite of opinions obtained in interviews with knowledgable Palestinian and Israel sources.

With the arrest of Nablus Mayor Bassam Shaka last month on since-disproved charges of advocating terrorism, sharply divided political factions in the West Bank and Gaza Strip began to pull together as never before, a process that accelerated when Israel retreated under internal and world pressure and released Shaka.

With a surge of self-confidence and euphoria, the Palestinian leaders have been celebrating their victory with a seemingly endless string of banquets, receptions and meetings throughout the West Bank, some of which have been flagrantly in violation of the military government's ban on unauthorized political rallies.

'Counters' or 'thieves' they're odds-on winners

By PETER MATTIACE

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — They sit hunched over blackjack tables in a spinning world of kings and aces and 19s, 20s and 21s.

Most call them "card counters" or simply "counters," skillful blackjack players whose razor-keen memories can calculate the odds of a jack or queen popping up after several decks of cards have been played.

On the other side of the tables, the unsmiling pit bosses call them "thieves."

Whatever the name, they recently made out like bandits in Atlantic City.

In a 13-day experiment, more than 100 counters cost Atlantic City's two casinos $1.4 million in lost revenues, authorities say.

The state-sponsored experiment was aimed at finding a statistical balance between the counters' right to play and the casinos' right to make money.

"It turned out to be a regular counters' Olympics," said one state official.

Nearly all the world's casinos, including those in Atlantic City, ban known and suspected counters as a house rule.

When the state began its experiment on Dec. 1, counters from Nevada to Canada to Czechoslovakia swooped into Atlantic City.

The counters often work in teams. Their identities are rarely known, but experienced pit bosses know their faces from Las Vegas and Reno.

Blackjack or 21, America's most popular casino table game, favors the house slightly when thousands and thousands of hands are played. That's how casinos make money.

Counters use sophisticated memory skills to "remember" which cards have been played and which remain with the dealer.

Most counters can't recall exactly what cards have been played — Atlantic City casinos use up to six decks — but the best can predict whether a high or low card is more likely to be dealt next.

With this knowledge, counters suddenly place large bets in hopes of cashing in on statistical odds slightly in their favor.

One expert estimated that a sophisticated counter backed by a $60,000 bankroll and betting $100 a hand during the New Jersey experiment could win an average of $17 an hour.

New Jersey officials, mindful of the counters' slight edge, modified their blackjack rules for the experiment to allow more shuffling when a pit boss suspected a counter was playing. Shuffling stymies a counter's system.

But casino profits plummeted. The state, which taxes 12 per cent of gross revenues, scrambled to tighten the rules, first by cutting increases in bets and then by preventing players from sitting out early hands.

No matter what they did, officials said, the counters kept winning and the casinos' profits kept slipping. On two consecutive days, two major casinos actually lost money on the blackjack tables.

Joseph Lordi, chairman of New Jersey's casino control commission, called off the experiment on Dec. 13 because the counters threatened "the profits of the casinos and the viability of the game itself."

Ken Uston, 46, a Harvard Business School graduate and a former Pacific Stock Exchange executive, is the best-known card counter. Uston and his team of eight hit the tables on the morning of Dec. 1.

"They don't know how to identify a counter," he said. "Anybody who plays black ($100) chips they believe are counters."

He won't say how much his team won or lost, but he says "hogwash" to the casinos' claims that counters were robbing them blind.

A few minutes before midnight on New Year's Eve my Father would step outside with the scuttle full of coal, a loaf of bread and a wallet with money in it. Thieves broke into the home of former New York Deputy Mayor Herman Badillo in the Riverdale section of the Bronx and stole 30 pairs of cufflinks. The robbery was discovered by his wife, Irma, who said the cufflinks represented 18 years of marital gifts for "birthday, Father's Day, anniversary, Christmas — what else do you give a husband?" Now, at least, everyone else knows what to give him.

The city fathers in Braselton, Ga., (pop. 550) are all brothers, uncles and cousins, and now a municipal election scheduled for Jan. 3 has been called off because Mayor J.L. Braselton and City Councilmen H.B. Braselton, H.F. Braselton, H.H. Braselton and H.E. Braselton have nobody running against them. They also hold all the offices of the Braselton Banking Co., the Braselton Shopping Centre and the Braselton Improvement Co., which owns several thousand acres and builds houses on the lots it sells. Since the mayor's grandfather founded the town 103 years ago, every mayor has been a Braselton. The incumbent, who is 79, has served 23 years. Three years ago, however, Mayor Braselton had to contend with a political challenge for his job from a woman — Wynell Braselton. She's the wife of his nephew, Royce Braselton.

Crane

It was her lawyers, "the best in the world," who were credited by Arlene Crane for her acquittal in McLean, Va. Mrs. Crane, wife of Philip Crane of Illinois, a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, had been charged with failing to have the family's Labrador retriever confined for rabies observation after the dog bit a 6-year-old boy. But some credit for the verdict could be claimed by 19-year-old Catherine Crane, one of the Cranes' seven daughters. She testified that it was she, not her mother, who was responsible for the dog.

The way the neighbors in upstate Columbia County, N.Y., see it, Peggy Rockefeller, wife of David Rockefeller, is the moving spirit behind the couple's purchase of 780 acres of Hudson Valley farmland for an estimated $1 million. They have seen her flying in by helicopter to visit the four properties in the town of Livingston. They hear, too, that Mrs. Rockefeller sometimes operates a tractor at home in Pocantico Hills, where she began the cattle-raising project.

Dear Abby:

A member of our family (I'll call her Wendy) needs psychiatric help (our family physician told us so), but if we just mention the word 'psychiatrist' Wendy blows up and says she's not 'crazy.'

Do you think we could prevail upon a psychiatrist to come to the house and pretend to be just a 'friend' — or a regular doctor? That way he could observe Wendy, and maybe win her confidence, and then later on treat her? If she knew he was a psychiatrist, she wouldn't even talk to him.

Stumped

Dear Stumped:

No reputable psychiatrist would permit himself to be introduced to a patient as a 'friend' or even a 'regular doctor.' When Wendy learns that the psychiatrist was part of a plan to trick her, she will lose all confidence in him and I wouldn't blame her. Ask the family physician, whom Wendy likes and trusts, to try to persuade her to see a psychotherapist. Honesty is still the best policy.

Dear Abby:

I'm a high school senior. I recently had a party at my home when my parents were away. They approved of it. In fact, it was my mother's idea. All the invited kids showed up, but so did a lot of kids were not invited, most of whom I didn't even know. These uninvited kids brought beer and liquor, obstructed traffic in front of our house and littered the neighbor's yard with beer cans. My parents blame me and I am now grounded for a month!

Grounded

Dear Grounded:

If your parents are holding you responsible for the misconduct of uninvited kids who forced their way into your home, then they are being unreasonable. But if you made these hoodlums welcome when they showed up uninvited, you deserve to be grounded. You should have called the police as soon as those crashers showed up and refused to leave.

Dear Abby:

This is written with a prayer that it will save just one marriage. It's a long story, but I'll make it short:

Many years ago, after 16 years of marriage, I became attracted to a married man. He was a wonderful listener, and I was lonely. My husband was a good man, but he was gone a lot.

This soon led to secret meetings. Within two years, we had become so deeply involved that we decided we couldn't live without each other, so we broke up two fine families and were married. My children hated me for what I had done, and his children hated him, so you can imagine what kind of marriage we had.

The unhappiness we caused our respective families cannot be described here.

To all married people who think it might be exciting: Don't! If someone asks, 'May I call you?' say, 'No,' and run like the devil is after you.

Too Smart Too Late

Secrets of sourdough for starters

By TIMOTHY AEPPEL
Christian Science Monitor

The bread bakers of Germany may not be able to put loaves on the shelves of our stores, but they can share the secrets that will bring a continental flavor into you home baking.

GERMAN SOURDOUGH STARTER

1 pound whole rye flour
1 ounce yeast
1 quart water

Dissolve yeast in water. Combine with rye flour and mix into a soft dough and place a lid or piece of wax paper over the container. Leave undisturbed for 3 days at room temperature.

If you make sourdough bread regularly, you will want to keep a small piece of this starter dough, at least 1 pound, always on hand. By mixing it with the sour ingredients, the souring process is speeded up considerably.

GERMAN SOURDOUGH BREAD

1 pound, 8 ounces coarse pumpernickel flour
3 pounds bread flour
2 ounces compressed yeast or 4 packages dry yeast
1½ ounces salt
4 ounces honey or molasses

Remove cover from fermenting sour starter and add the pumpernickel flour and 1 ounce of yeast. Add one-half cup water to make a soft dough. Continue adding water until dough is soft but not soupy. Knead and place in a warm spot for 3 hours.

After 3 hours you will find that your little creation has turned into something resembling a half-inflated beach ball. Now add the remaining ingredients.

Knead dough about 5 minutes with your hands. dough is too soupy or too dry. Adjust by adding more water or bread flour. Set dough aside to rise for the second time, about 20 minutes.

Knead dough one last time before dividing it into loaves. Set it aside 5 minutes while oiling the bread forms. Knead loaves into log-shaped pieces and place them in 7- or 8-inch bread pans. Place in a warm spot until dough has risen to the rims.

Preheat oven to 425 degrees F. Lower temperature to 390 degrees F. and bake 40 mins.

Notice that German Sourdough is a heavy, densely textured bread. Traditionally it is sliced as thinly as possible for serving. Makes 1 pound starter and six 1-pound, 3-ounce loaves.

HOLIDAY STOLLEN

4 ounces yeast
4 pounds bread flour
1 pound cake flour
8 ounces sugar
1½ pounds butter
8 ounces ground almonds
4 pounds golden raisins
5 ounces diced citron
1 quart lukewarm milk
1 grated lemon rind
½ teaspoon mace
½ teaspoon cinnamon
Salt and cloves, a pinch.

In advance, soak raisins in water to help them retain moisture and flavor through the baking process. Heat milk at lowest setting while grating lemon. Save rind for flavoring.

Put flour in a bowl and make a small crater in the centre. Dissolve yeast in one-third of the quart of lukewarm milk and pour into flour crater. Work together into a dough. Place dough in a warm spot and relax while the yeast takes over.

After dough has risen, add other ingredients, minus raisins, citron and almonds. Work until dough is smooth. Put back into a warm spot and let rise for the second time, about one-half hour, depending on how active the dough is. Meanwhile, drain raisins.

When dough is plump and warm, add fruit and almonds and carefully press them into the dough. Knead carefully, spreading fruit and almonds evenly throughout. Set dough aside for its third and final rise.

Now is the time personal preference can join hands with imagination to make one big loaf or several small ones. There also is the matter of shape. You may want round, oblong or even pear-shape loaves.

Here is the technique preferred by the old masters: Stretch dough sideways and fold it together, using flour to prevent dough from sticking. Fold and roll toward you until you have a log-shape loaf. Set it aside and allow the dough to relax for several minutes.

Now roll lightly with a small rolling pin or a round wooden stick. The raisins have a tendency to pop out of the dough during this operation. Never fear. Gather them together and save. With dough somewhat flattened out in the middle, sprinkle it with the refugee raisins and fold it over. Punch down firmly.

Place finished loaf on a baking sheet and set aside for at least 10 minutes. Meanwhile, preheat oven to 400 degrees F. Place bread in oven and lower temperature to 350 degrees F.

Bake until bread is a deep golden brown, 30 to 40 minutes. For smaller loaves, this time should be adjusted downward.

Tastes vary, but many Stollen fans agree that the most beautiful and delectable loaves are glazed with melted butter while still hot and sprinkle with confectionery sugar.

Accent your turkey leftovers with baked acorn squash

Turkey still lurking

The big day with all the trimmings has come and gone. Everybody ate heartily but, alas, there is enough turkey remaining to feed a small army.

You're going to find turkey sandwiches a little dull. And freezing the leftover meat may mean you have something the consistency of sawdust come next spring when you remember it's in there.

No problem! Some of the choicest eating actually follows the holiday with the use of innovative recipes to make the most of turkey leftovers. Here is a new one that combines sensible economy with a bit of imagination.

Turkey Squash Bake is an admirable dish that takes advantage of in-season acorn squash. This hot and hearty supper is pretty as a picture and easy to prepare too with the use of an envelope of turkey gravy mix. A dash of nutmeg gives a marvelously subtle tone and chopped walnuts add a pleasing crunchiness. What a nice way for the leftover turkey to go!

TURKEY SQUASH BAKE

2 or 3 acorn squash
2 Salt and pepper
1 envelope (⅞-oz.) gravy mix for turkey
1 cup water
1½ cups diced cooked turkey
½ cup chopped green pepper
¼ cup chopped walnuts
1 tablespoon brown sugar
¼ teaspoon Nutmeg, if desired
Jellied cranbery sauce, if desired.

Cut squash in half; remove seeds. Place, cut side down, in shallow baking pan. Pour in about ½ inch boiling water. Bake in 400° oven 40 minutes. Discard water. Turn squash and season with salt and pepper. Combine gravy mix and water in medium-size saucepan, stirring until smooth. Stir in turkey, pepper, walnut, brown sugar, and nutmeg. Bring to a boil, stirring occasionally. Place generous spoonful of turkey mixture in cavity of each squash half. Return to oven and bake 20 minutes longer, until squash is tender. Garnish with cranberry sauce if desired. 4 to 6 servings.

Gout is a strange, complex disease

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

I have had two attacks of gout in five years. When I have them the medicine I am given brings me relief. What I don't understand is what brings on an attack when I seem to be otherwise in good health. — Mr. S.L.

Dear Mr. L.:

Gout is a very strange and complicated disease. Basically, it is a disturbance in the manufacture and excretion of uric acid. Some people have a "gouty" tendency. Many patients stay in perfect health for many months, or even years, on a restricted anti-gout diet. Then, suddenly, without any apparent reason, a painful attack or flareup of gout may strike the joints of the feet, shoulders or other parts of the body.

A relatively slight injury, a departure from the prescribed diet, exposure to cold or overindulgence in alcohol may precipitate an attack of gout. Even a relatively simple routine surgical procedure may be responsible for a flareup.

Sometimes, people who have a gouty tendency and who have been using drugs will suddenly decide to give up their medication. This is a common error. The maintenance of the prescribed drug is essential to block repeated attacks of acute gout.

There is now a very effective array of drugs that can control gout, either by preventing the accumulation of uric acid in the blood (responsible for gout) or by increasing the excretion of uric acid from the body, in the urine.

So effective are these drugs today that, in most instances, gout can be considered a controllable condition.

Among this morning's mail were letters from two readers in different parts of the country. Both asked questions about optometrists and how they differ from medical eye specialists.

Ophthalmologists are medical doctors who have had special training in the medical and surgical aspects of diseases of the eye.

Optometrists are not M.D.s, yet they, too, have had excellent training. [illegible] limited to the diagnosis and correction of defective vision. It does not include any aspect of surgery.

The eye is a remarkable index of diseases that may exist elsewhere in the body. Vascular disturbances, neurological problems and diabetes are only a few of the many conditions that are diagnostically recognized by a careful inspection of the eye. Intrinsic diseases of the eye itself — infections, glaucoma, cataract formations, viral infections, allergies and tumors — are treated by the ophthalmologist.

It should be pointed out that many skilled optometrists recognize ewhen a problem exists and immediately refer their patients to an eye specialist for confirmation and treatment.

The older, the saltier

Q: I recently noticed that my elderly parents use what seems to me to be a considerable amount of salt. When they eat with us, they usually add salt to food that the rest of us find to be seasoned quite adequately. Is there a physiological reason for this?

A: As you may know, one's sense of taste and smell tend to decline with age. Compared with younger individuals, the elderly complain more frequently of dryness of food, weakness of flavor and a sour or bitter taste in the mouth. Thus, as one's sense of smell diminishes, the bitter flavor of a green pepper, for example, becomes more exaggerated, overshadowing its pleasant odor.

There also is a tendency to compensate for altered perceptions of taste and smell by using more salt. This, of course, becomes a particular problem when elderly individuals with disorders of sodium and fluid balance and/or hypertension are placed on salt-restricted diets.

food for thought

By JEAN MAYER

At home, the antidote to the blandness of a salt-restricted diet is to rely heavily on herbs, spices and other flavorings. Indeed, quite palatable meals can be prepared without using any salt at all. Even elderly people who may not need to cut way back on their salt intake but who complain that food doesn't taste like it used to may benefit from learning to use herbs and spices more extensively.

But discarding whey with all its nutrients was more than just wasteful. Whey is a menacing pollutant. One hundred kilograms -- that's 220 pounds -- of liquid whey has a polluting potential equal to the sewage produced by 45 people. In order to avoid pollution, expensive pretreatment of whey was necessary, and the cost involved was added to the price of the cheese.

Much effort has gone into converting what has been an industrial liability into an economical source of good nutrition. Powdered whey is used in producing a variety of foods, including everything from breads and baked goods to ice cream and other frozen desserts.

Q: In answering a recent question about the use of lactose, or milk sugar, as an additive, you said that whey produced in making cheese was discarded until recently. You said that many new uses for whey have been found. Can you tell me more about this?

A: For years, whey was discarded as a waste product of cheese production. This was a nutritionally extravagant practice when you consider that, in producing cheese, 100 pounds of milk yields 90 pounds of whey and only 10 pounds of cheese. Moreover, the so-called 'waste' of whey contains 20 percent of the protein, almost all of the lactose and about half of all other nutrients in the liquid milk.

With advanced processing methods, nutrient components can be separated. Numerous uses for these components have been developed. In addition to lactose, there is also whey protein concentrate (WPC), which is particularly useful in producing special diet foods and infant formulas as well as in the manufacture of animal feed.

One of the problems of drying whey, however, is the high cost of the energy the process requires. Also, small cheese plants cannot afford the costly equipment required to condense and dry the whey. Consequently, considerable effort has been directed toward using whey "as is."

Souffle best example of miracle food

the 60-minute gourmet

There are three "miracle" foods — cream puffs, puff pastry and souffles — whose "magic" derives from expansion by air. Of the three, souffles are considered to be the most elegant and the easiest to make. One of the finest souffles is a double-layered affair that has a base of creamed or sauced foods with souffle mixture piled on top. Outlined here is a double-decker favorite, the components of which could also be served separately without apology.

CREVETTES AU CARI
(Curried Shrimp)

1 pound medium-size shrimp, about 24 to 30
3 tablespoons butter
one-fourth cup finely chopped onion
6 tablespoons finely chopped peeled apple one-fourth teaspoon finely minced garlic
2 to 3 tablespoons curry powder, or to taste one-third cup finely chopped banana one-half cup fresh or canned chicken broth one-fourth cup fresh or canned tomato sauce two-thirds cup heavy cream
Salt
1 tablespoon flour.

1. Peel and devein the shrimp. Run under cold water and pat dry with paper toweling. There should be about two cups.

2. Heat one tablespoon of butter in a saucepan and add the onion, apple and garlic. Cook about five minutes, stirring, and sprinkle with curry powder. Stir about 30 seconds, then stir in banana, chicken broth and tomato sauce. Simmer about two minutes, stirring. Add cream and salt to taste. Simmer about two minutes longer.

3. Meanwhile, blend another tablespoon of butter with the flour and add it, stirring. Remove the sauce from the heat.

4. Heat the remaining tablespoon of butter in a skillet and add the shrimp. Cook over high heat, stirring with a spoon and shaking the skillet. Cook about three minutes — no longer. Add the sauce, stir until shrimp are coated. Bring to the boil. The shrimp may now be used as a base for the souffle that follows or served on toast or with rice.

Yield: Four small servings.

Souffle au fromage
(Cheese souffle)

4 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk
Salt and freshly ground pepper
Freshly grated nutmeg, about ⅛ teaspoon
6 drops Tabasco sauce
one-fourth teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon cornstarch
2 tablespoons water
8 eggs, separated
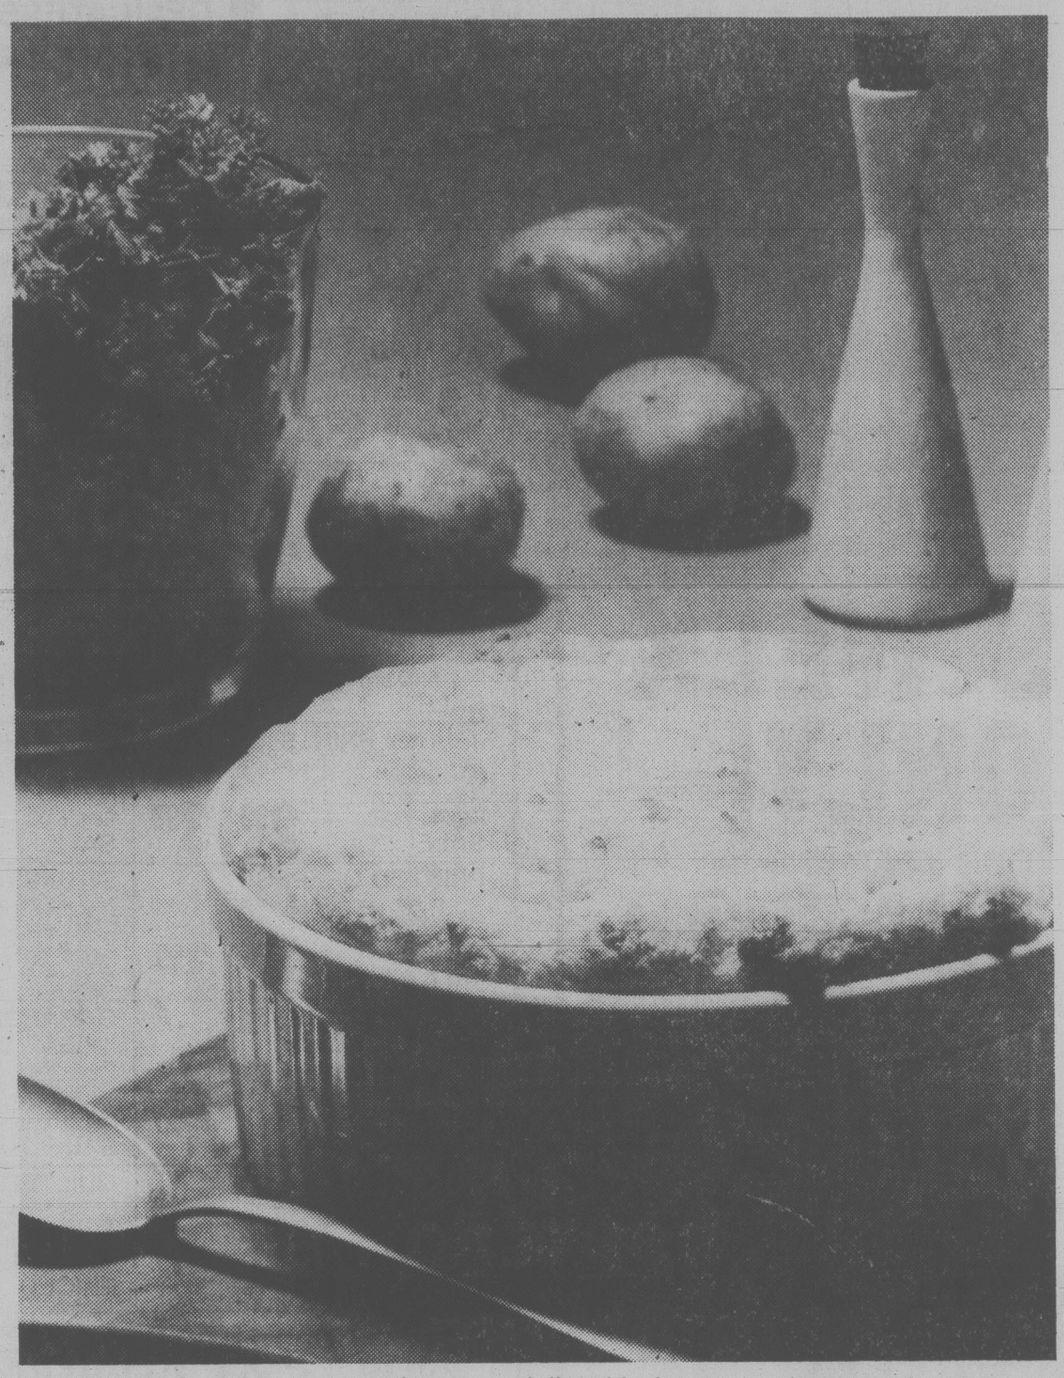
one-half cup grated Parmesan cheese two-thirds cup finely diced Swiss cheese.

1. Generously butter the inside of a six-cup or seven-cup souffle dish and place it in the freezer.

2. Preheat oven to 400 degrees.



Souffles are popular, especially with the vegetarian crowd

3. Melt the butter in a saucepan and add the flour, stirring with a wire whisk. When blended, add the milk, stirring vigorously. Cook, stirring, until thickened and smooth. Season with salt and pepper to taste, nutmeg, Tabasco sauce and Worcestershire sauce. Blend cornstarch with water and stir into the sauce.

4. Remove the sauce from the stove for a minute or so. Beat the yolks briefly and add them to the sauce, stirring vigorously with the whisk. Return the sauce to the heat and cook, stirring constantly all around the bottom of the saucepan until the sauce starts to bubble. Do not cook more than 5 or 10 seconds, or the sauce may curdle. Spoon and scrape the sauce into a large mixing bowl. Stir in the Parmesan cheese and let the sauce cool briefly. Stir in the Swiss cheese.

5. Beat the egg whites until stiff. Add about one-third of them to the sauce and beat the whites into the sauce. Fold in the remaining whites. Spoon the mixture into the chilled souffle dish. Place the dish in the oven. As a safeguard you may want to place a baking dish or sheet of aluminum foil on the bottom of the oven to catch any drippings. Bake five minutes, then reduce the oven heat to 375 degrees. Bake 15 minutes longer, a total of 20 minutes cooking time. If you want a souffle with a less moist center, continue baking 5 to 10 minutes longer.

Yield: Six servings.

Cheese Souffle with Curried Shrimp

1. Preheat oven to 400 degrees.

2. Generously butter the inside of an eight-cup or nine-cup souffle dish and place it in the freezer.

3. Prepare the curried shrimp (see recipe) and set them aside.

4. Prepare the cheese souffle mixture (see recipe). When it is ready, spoon the curried shrimp into the prepared souffle dish. Top it with the souffle mixture. Place the souffle in the oven. Bake five minutes and reduce the oven heat to 375 degrees. Continue to bake 15 minutes longer. If you want a less moist center, continue baking the souffle 5 to 10 minutes longer. Serve portions of the souffle along with portions of the curried shrimp.

Yield: Six to eight servings.

Chocolate syrup cake

(8 servings)

½ cup butter
1 cup sugar
4 eggs
1 can (16 ounces) chocolate syrup
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup self-rising flour. Cream butter and sugar together. Add eggs one at a time, beating well after each addition. Add syrup and vanilla. Fold in flour. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 to 50 minutes in a 9-by-13 inch pan, well greased and floured. Cool. Sprinkle with powdered sugar.

Take stuffing from turkey questions & answers

Q. How long can leftover turkey stuffing be frozen? Should any leftover turkey be boned before freezing? How long will cooked turkey keep in the freezer?

A: If you plan to hold the stuffing or dressing for longer than two to three days remove it from the turkey cavity immediately after serving and freeze it right away If properly packed in airtight containers or moisture-vapor-proof freezer wrap and frozen at zero degrees, the stuffing should keep well for up to one month.

Regarding boning of leftover turkey for freezing, this step is not necessary if the bird has been properly cooked. Boning and removing turkey skin before freezing had been recommended to guard against spoilage due to bacterial contamination that starts along the bones in the body cavity and on the skin. This spoilage is activated if the turkey has not been completely cooked. Another reason for recommending boning leftover turkey was to conserve space in the freezer. Boned or not, leftover turkey will freeze well, if properly packaged, up to three months.

Q. I occasionally find a recipe that calls for Parma ham. Can you tell me what it is? What is a good substitute?

A. Parma ham is a ham — prosciutto — that comes from the province of Parma, the same province that gives Parmesan cheese its name. It is generally conceded among connoisseurs that the finest Parma ham comes from the village of Langhirano, which is south of the city of Parma.

It is said that the air of Langhirano, which is situated in the mountains, is responsible for the exceptional quality of its hams. Hams are shipped, it is said, into Langhirano from all over Italy so that they may be given a proper final curing.

At present, the Federal Government prohibits the importation of any ham from Italy because of an outbreak there of swine fever in 1978. You can substitute any available prosciutto for Parma ham.

Q. I notice in many recipes that beer is called for as an ingredient in place of milk or water. Is there a reason?

A. For several reasons, depending on the recipe. It does, of course, contribute a slightly different flavor to recipes, although the difference is not a matter of pronounced bitterness.

I prefer to cook shrimp in beer if I want a platter of boiled shrimp. I would be hard put to tell you precisely why I feel the shrimp taste better when cooked in beer.

In another recipe, beer is used in the preparation of a batter for deep frying. In this case the beer substitutes for yeast as a mild leavening agent. The best-known main course prepared with beer is the carbonnade flamande of Belgian cuisine.

Q. I have developed a tremendous appetite for feta cheese. I use it in salads and in some baked dishes. Can you tell me what it is made from?

A. Feta cheese is usually produced by shepherds in the mountain regions near Athens. Traditionally it is made from ewe's milk, but frequently it is made from goat's milk. It is a salted cheese, preserved in a brine made of salt, milk and water. It belongs to a class of "pickled cheeses." Feta has a curious and delectable affinity for anchovies, black olives and tomatoes.

Q. Over the Christmas holidays I will be doing some entertaining and plan to serve eggnog. Can you tell me what appetizers or snacks go well with eggnog?

A. Eggnog, because of its intensely sweet richness, does not team well with any appetizers unless you consider salted nuts appetizers. It does not go well, for example, with such seafood as shrimp, lobsters, clams, crabs or anchovies. It certainly does not go well with anything containing mayonnaise. And so on. The ideal accompaniment for eggnog, if you insist on teaming it with something, is fruitcake. I, frankly, find eggnog a bit too much to serve as a preface to any meal. It is best served in midafternoon or after dinner. I prefer it frozen.

Q. I always save the liquids drained from cooked vegetables for soups. How long will these keep when refrigerated? Or should they be frozen?

A. Like most stocks made of meat, broths from cooked vegetables are fairly perishable. If you are going to keep them in the refrigerator for an extended period, you should remove them every three or four days, bring them to the boil, cool them once more and return to the refrigerator. Otherwise, it is best to freeze them and defrost them as necessary.

Q. Sometime ago I bought a large fresh pumpkin from a roadside stand in Vermont. It has kept well and I would like to make a pie. How do I go about cooking the pumpkin before combining it with eggs, milk, spices, etc.?

A. In the first place you may want to go out and buy a fresh pumpkin. The best pumpkins to be used for cooking are the small ones, about the size of a good-sized cantaloupe. Large pumpkins are full of fibers.

When ready to cook, quarter the pumpkin. Remove the seeds and inner fibers. Peel the pumpkin and cut the flesh into two-inch cubes. Steam the pumpkin cubes over hot water until tender. Add the cubes to a food processor. Or use a potato ricer. Process the pumpkin flesh until it is a fine puree.

In addition to their value at breakfast time, morning cereals can be used as toppings or desserts. Cooks will find toasted rice cereals to be particularly versatile.

Rice Cereals is a 13-page booklet which features sixteen kitchen-tested recipes. Green beans, eggs, salmon, and chicken are among the dishes that can be enhanced through the use of morning cereals. You'll need metric measures to try each of these brand new recipe ideas.

The cultivation of coffee for use as a beverage started in Arabia sometime before the year 1300. Coffee was introduced to America in 1671 and it didn't take long for coffee drinking to become a habit. In answer to the growing demand for coffee, the famous coffee industry of Latin America evolved.

Today, Latin American nations produce over four billion pounds a year for export. Coffee is one crop that cannot be harvested mechanically and — as a result — requires very special attention. Owners of plantations hire large numbers of manual laborers who live, work, and play right on the plantations. Most plantations are about 8 acres in size, but some run as large as 1000 acres. It is on these plantations that the vast majority of coffee consumed in Canada is harvested.

To obtain all the facts on coffee — from planting through to processing — write to the Home Services Dept., Nabob Foods Limited, P.O. Box 2170, Vancouver, British Columbia, V6B 3V6. Ask for the free booklet entitled, Coffee, The Story Behind It.

Corn oil is a fat that remains in liquid form at ordinary refrigerator temperatures. To make corn oil, dry shelled corn is softened in water, then crushed to free the germ which is rich in oil. Due to its high oil content, the germ tends to float in water while the remainder of the kernel sinks. As a result, separation is simply a matter of settling and skimming off the oil-bearing germ.

Once refined, corn oil is an excellent choice for salads, baking and frying. It is also very much at home in marinades and basting sauces.

Cooking With Corn Oil is a free folder that offers sixteen recipes which are enhanced by corn oil. For your free copy, write to: Consumer Services, Best Foods Division, Canada Starch Company, Box 129, Station "A", Montreal, Quebec, H3C 1C5. Please request the folder by name.

Emporium revived

craig claiborne

There is probably not a food anthology in or out of print that doesn't refer to the Christmas dinner served in the Cratchits' home in Dickens's Christmas Carol.

Rarely mentioned and little known, however, is another Dickens gem, a marvelously descriptive passage about food and celebration in an essay on the derby at Epsom Downs. Specifically, the passage deals with the early years and influence of that grand food emporium, Fortnum & Mason.

I discovered it while delving into the life of Isabella Beeton, who wrote the classic "Mrs. Beeton's Book of Household Management," first published in 1861.

On the great day of the derby, Dickens wrote, all the roads leading to the track were "so thronged and blocked by every description of carriage that it is marvelous to consider how, when, and where they were all made — out of what possible wealth they are all maintained — and by what laws the supply of horses is kept equal to the demand .... barouches, phaetons, broughams, gigs, four-wheeled chaises, four-in-hands, hansom cabs, cabs of lesser note, chaise-carts, donkey-carts, tilted vans made arborescent with green boughs and carrying no end of people, and a cask of beer .... equestrians, pedestrians, horse-dealers, gentlemen, notabilities, and swindlers, by tens of thousands."

"Never, to be sure," Dickens wrote, "were there so many carriages, so many fours, so many twos, so many ones, so many horsemen, so many people who have come down by 'rail,' so many fine ladies in so many broughams, so many of Fortnum & Mason's hampers, so much ice and champagne! If I were on the turf, and had a horse to enter for the Derby, I would call that horse Fortnum & Mason, convinced that with that name he would beat the field. Public opinion would bring him in somehow. Look where I will — in connection with the carriages — made fast upon the top, or occupying the box, or tied up behind, or dangling below, or peeping out of a window — I see Fortnum & Mason. And now, Heavens! all the hampers fly wide open, and the green Downs burst into a blossom of lobster-salad."

On the Monday before the race, the author continues, he made a tour of the "Grand Stand," and was lured into the basement by the smell of cooking, where he found:

"Wine-cellars, beer-cellars, larders, sculleries, and kitchens, all as gigantically appointed, and as copiously furnished as if they formed part of an Ogre's castle. To furnish the refreshment saloon, the Grand Stand has in store two thousand four hundred tumblers, one thousand two hundred wine-glasses, three thousand plates and dishes ... a whole fleck of sixty-five lambs have to be roasted, and dished, and garnished, by the Derby Day. Twenty rounds of beef, four hundred lobsters, one hundred and fifty tongues, twenty fillets of veal, one hundred sirloins of beef, five hundred spring chickens, three hundred and fifty pigeon pies; a countless number of quartern loaves, and an incredible quantity of ham have to be cut up into sandwiches; eight hundred eggs have got to be boiled for the pigeon pies and salads. The forest of lettuces, the acres of cress, and beds of radishes, which will have to be chopped up; the gallons of 'dressing' that will have to be poured out and converted into salads for the insatiable Derby Day, will be best understood by a memorandum from the chief of that department to the chef-de-cuisine, which happened, incidentally, to fall under our notice: 'Pray don't forget a large tub and a birchbroom for mixing the salad!'"

Feingold theory supported

By PEGGY KATALINICH
Los Angeles Times

After Dr. Ben Feingold burst upon the scene in 1973 with a diet plan to cure hyperactive children, many parents embraced his theory enthusiastically, forming Feingold Associations around the continent to promote the word that hyperactive children could be free of drug treatment if they ate a natural diet devoid of artificial food colors, flavors and some preservatives.

The scientific community, however, was skeptical, even hostile, to Feingold's hypothesis and took to the laboratory to find proof beyond his testimonial evidence.

Six years and several dozen major studies later, Feingold, a San Francisco allergist, believes that the evidence is in and that he has been vindicated. "We now have confirmed behavioral studies to support my theory," said Feingold, chief emeritus of the department of allergy at Kaiser Permenente Medical Centre in San Francisco.

Although scientists who conducted the studies remain less certain than the enthusiastic Feingold, even avid disbelievers begrudgingly admit that there may be a small subset of hyperactive children for whom a diet that eliminates the artificial coloring of most processed foods is helpful.

And while that concession might not seem like much, it represents quite a shift in the thinking of the scientific community that started out viewing Feingold as "silly by definition," as one scientist commented.

"The research doesn't support the kinds of dramatic claims that Feingold has made (that his diet will cure 50 percent of all hyperactive children)," said J. Preston Harley, who conducted one of the largest studies, at the University of Wisconsin. "But we can't rule out that it doesn't affect any children."

Harley, an assistant professor of neurology whose studies have been cited by skeptics as disproving Feingold's hypothesis, said interpretation of the research varies, depending upon the bias of the beholder. "The believers will take out studies and say we did find evidence, pulling out the one or two who were positive and ignore the negative," he said. "... But I'm not going to argue with families if they are happy with the diet, providing they have been to specialists to make sure there is nothing else wrong with the child. If it's better for the child and the family that's all right; it doesn't matter if the experimental evidence isn't there."

"That is the nature of medicine," said Feingold. "Ninety per cent of what we do is empirical, build of very meager scientific information. When we give a tablet, we don't know precisely how it works . . . We know if we carry out certain procedures the patient will get well."

To carry out the Feingold diet, two groups of foods are eliminated. Group one is composed of all foods that contain synthetic colors and flavors sell as BHA and BHT, two preservatives, according to The Feingold Cookbook for Hyperactive Children, by Feingold and his wife, Helen, (Random House, $5.95). Since the list of foods with these compounds is huge, Feingold advises parents to read labels carefully.

In the second group are fruits and vegetables containing natural salicylates, compounds similar to aspirin; again, a list is needed to know which fruits and vegetables to avoid. Feingold advocates that for the first four to six weeks on the diet, all foods from both categories should be eliminated. If a good response persists, the fruits and vegetables can be slowly added to determine which ones can be safely consumed and which should always be avoided. Not all children react to all salicylate-containing foods, Feingold said.

"The diet is an appealing alternative that allows parents who are at their wits' end to alternate to medication. No one wants their kid to be on speed," added Harley, referring to Ritalin, which is a stimulant, but which is used to calm hyperactive children.

Ritalin and other stimulants have been traditionally used in the treatment of hyperactive children — an estimated 5 to 20 percent of all school-age children. While Ritalin frequently acts to eliminate the frenetic behavior of a hyperactive child, there are no studies that it improves the child's performance in school. And the drug is not without its side effects, including "loss of appetite, abdominal pain, weight loss during prolonged therapy, insomnia and tachycardia (irregular heartbeat)," according to an information sheet from CIBA-GEIGY Corp., manufacturer of the drug.

While scientists do not agree on what constitutes hyperkinesis, a positive reaction to Ritalin is used as a definition by at least one researcher, Dr. James Swanson of Toronto. It is Swanson's reseach that appears to lend the most support to Feingold's theory. Feingold, in fact, characterized the studies as landmark, although he added that "for the real skeptics, it doesn't mean anything; most of them are trying to defend the food industry." Swanson gave hyperactive children who had previously respondend to Ritalin and at the time of the study were on the Feingold diet "challenges" of 150 milligrams of food dye in capsule form. The tests were blind — neither the children nor the researchers knew when the capsule was filled with dye or a placebo.

Swanson found that about 75 per cent of the children had an impaired performance on a learning test after having the capsule with dye compared to their performance after the placebe. While he found that a high percentage responded to the food dye, Swanson doesn't believe as many children respond positively to the diet. "We put 50 children on the diet and followed up for a year. Nine had a good response (by the same measure)," he said.

"The kids were not going wild and bouncing off the wall (after the food dye), but the experiment makes the point that food dyes have an effect," said Swanson. "For that reason, I think there is something to Feingold's hypothesis and I don't dismiss it."

Swanson gave children much more food dye in his tests than researchers in the United States use, but he believes 150 milligrams is a closer apporximation to the amount of dye ingested by the heaviest users from 5 to 12 years old. "The figures I take are from a Food and Drug Administration memo, and although there is some dispute, they are certainly more accurate than 26 milligrams in laboratory tests; we find an effect at 100 and certainly at 150 milligrams."

"What I have concluded is that Feingold has provided one of the absolute essentials of psychotherapy — hope. Almost any one who provides hope will get results," said Conners. "If the parents think the kids are better, they pick up on that attitude, which is very positive. What I object to is clinicians using it as a ticket to instant wealth."

Spielberg Second World War spoof a bomb

scott's world
by vernon scott

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Word is out in Hollywood that "1941," the new Steven Spielberg comedy spectacular is a $32 million bomb.

The long awaited film by the director of "Jaws" and "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" is a World War II spoof of panic in Southern California in anticipation of a Japanese-mainland attack following Pearl Harbor.

Much was expected of Spielberg, Hollywood's wunderkind who directed "Jaws," a golden boy who could do no wrong.

He joined a fraternity of young "auteurs" — writers-directors-producers universally celebrated in the movie community as geniuses.

Their numbers include Francis Ford Coppola (The Godfather), John Landis (Animal House), John Milius (The Wind and The Lion), Michael Cimino (The Deer Hunter), George Lucas (Star Wars).

They are the young, independent new breed whose first films were artistic and box-office successes — most of them wildly successful. They also are friends who exchange ideas and extend help and advice to each other.

Following the disappointing reception of Coppola's controversial "Apocalypse Now," at a cost of more than $30 million, it was with some trepidation that Hollywood awaited Spielberg's "1941." Were the young turks fallible after all?

Last summer a Universal Pictures executive was asked how "1941" was progressing. He replied, "We have no idea. Spielberg won't let us see a frame."

Another Universal vice president was asked how he could smile when costs were spiraling on "1941." "I'm not as sick as I might be if Columbia Pictures didn't have 50 percent of this picture."

The first real sign of trouble, discounting soaring costs and production delays, was the sneak preview of "1941" in Dallas almost two months ago. The audience didn't laugh.

The picture's premiere was delayed while Spielberg re-cut and re-edited his massive, explosive, unfunny comedy. Many in the huge cast had their roles cut to the bone, unfortunately not the two "Saturday Night Live" survivors, John Belushi and Dan Aykroyd.

Earlier this month "1941" had its dazzling Hollywood premiere with floodlights, fans in grandstands, fireworks and much hoopla. It was a sad, disappointing evening. There wasn't a single belly laugh in the audience.

The opening scene was promising. The same girl who opened "Jaws" ran nude down a beach, plunged into the Pacific and was quickly surrounded by turbulent, boiling water accompanied by the "Jaws" theme music. Instead of being swallowed by a shark, the nude cutie was hoisted by a Japanese submarine.

Following the premiere the audience attended a party which was more like a wake. Belushi, one of the few stars with courage enough to attend, was white-faced with shock at the hostile reception given "1941."

He had to be more shocked by the reviews. Los Angeles critics, usually kind to movies, lambasted the picture mercilessly.

Robert Stack, who portrays Gen. Vinegar Joe Stillwell in "1941" as the only sane character in the picture, attended the party, too.

Stack, perhaps the sole cast member not to feel the critics' lash, came to Spielberg's defense, saying, "I don't want to take on the critics, but I think they were reviewing the $32 million instead of the picture.

"I can't make a value judgment of '1941.' As an actor in a large picture I saw only bits and pieces during the three weeks I worked over a period of six months. It's like seeing only part of a jigsaw puzzle.

"I'm lucky to be in a picture this big — win, lose or draw. I'm also grateful for the opportunity to work with Spielberg. I'd like to work with him again in something more linear.

"There's a line of genius in Steve who's proving it in the re-issue of 'Close Encounters' by adding sequences inside the space ship and cutting out some of the stuff audiences didn't like in the original. It's not a different picture so much as it is a different focus. You'll see.

"From the beginning '1941' was a very high risk movie. It was a shot in the dark, and, believe me, Spielberg gave it his best shot."

Stack, who has appeared in such box-office hits as "The High and the Mighty" and "Written On The Wind," said "1941" had the feel of a hit during production.

He said the cast and crew were filled with enthusiasm for the project.

"There are few movie situations where an idea is carried to its optimum," he said. "'1941' had that momentum going for it. Everything was done to make it as visibly attractive as possible with the highest professionalism.

"Bill Fraker, one of the great cinematographers, did this movie and said it was the most fulfilling six months he'd ever spent on a picture.

"The critics, I think, got carried away. There's a lot of very funny, very good things in '1941.' It may not live up to our expectations but then what the hell does?"

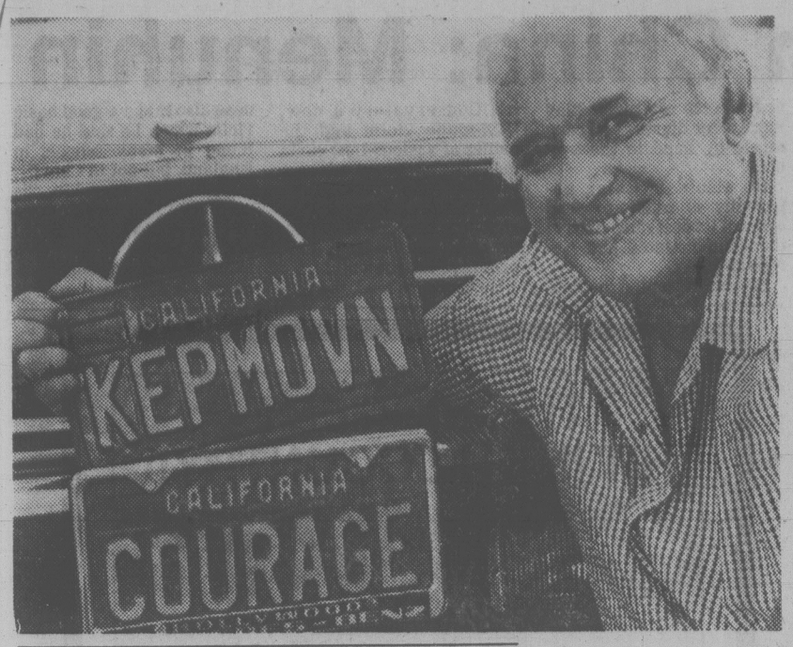
Renowned muralist dead

MONTREAL (CP) — Jordi Bonet, internationally-known sculptor and muralist, died in hospital here Tuesday after a long illness.

Bonet was born in Barcelona in 1932 and studied in Spain before starting his career in Canada in 1956. Perhaps his best known work is a controversial mural at Quebec City's Grand Theatre. Several of his murals also adorn buildings in the United States.

Two years ago he completed a book of drawings titled Le Livre de Naissances (The Book of Births) which dealt with the theme of birth. He set up his studio and an art gallery at an old manor house near Mont St. Hilaire just east of Montreal.

Theatre standards high: Reid



ACTOR'S LICENCE declares Rod Steiger's new found spirit after a divorce and a quadruple heart bypass operation within the last 1½ years.

TORONTO (CP) — Fiona Reid, fresh from a euphoric run of Waiting For The Parade in Hammersmith's Lyric Theatre in London, can't wait to tell Canadians how good their own theatre is.

"I was very touched by the welcome I received from the other actresses in the show," she said of her two-month engagement, in which she was the only Canadian. "And it's given me a new perspective on Canada. It made me proud of the standards we achieve here."

This is not a new perspective for Miss Reid. When she returned from the Edinburgh festival last summer, she told detractors of Canadian theatre that they were out of date. Actors and writers here, she said, are easily the equals of their counterparts in England.

She spoke with fervor, unusual for an actress who only two years ago was ensconced in the security of the King of Kensington television series and no longer thought of herself as "an actress who could inhabit different roles."

A series of stage roles changed that. She appeared in David Dudkin's drama Ashes, and was acclaimed as Catherine in Waiting For the Parade. It transformed the woman who used to make fun of herself as Kensington's Kathy King.

By the time she appeared at the Manitoba Theatre Centre last year for Flea In Her Ear and She Stoops to Conquer, Miss Reid had acquired a new confidence in her acting — and in Canadian theatre.

The enthusiasm was evident in Waiting for the Parade at the Tarragon in Toronto. And it infected Richard Cottrell, who read the script and was eager to take the play back to England with him.

He did — and he took her too. For three weeks she worked obsessively on the play, polishing her own role and finding herself an unwitting resource for four English actresses who rounded out the cast.

"We did the whole play with Canadian accents, of course," she said.

Great violinists in China: Menuhin

PEKING (AP) — At 11 o'clock one night, Yehudi Menuhin returned from dinner to his hotel room to find an eight-year-old boy who had travelled cross-country from Xinjiang with a battered violin to play for the maestro.

"It was inspiring and very touching. He is very talented," the renowned violinist said of the child's playing of Wieniawsky's Scherzo Tarantelle.

"I'd love to have that boy in my school in London," Menuhin said of the youngster, who was waiting outside his door with his father and his violin teacher. "He's just the sort of student we need."

Menuhin did not get the boy's name before he nodded in gratitude and departed quickly into the night.

Menuhin, who spent 10 days in China, said, "In 10 years or so, many of the best musicians in the world will be Chinese. We have a great deal to learn from them. It is far from the fact that we have everything to teach them."

Menuhin, who was first invited to China years ago by the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung, said he would be proud to have two or three of China's top violin teachers in his school in Surrey, England.

The philosopher virtuoso gave three concerts with the Peking Central Philharmonic Orchestra, rehearsed four times with the group, gave three lectures and three open classes for young musicians.

"Many young violinists are remarkably well-trained, despite the 10-year gap of the cultural revolution," said Menuhin. "They have a tremendously high standard of playing, deep feeling and great understanding. It's like seeing a beautiful very young flower that's going to blossom in a few years."

Playing Mozart, he said, is like creating "a lovely vineyard on the slope of an active volcano. It's very quiet and growing beautifully with lovely grapes, but inside it is very hot and active." Menuhin said Chinese music students study four hours in the morning, rehearse five hours in the afternoon, play more after dinner, and copy music by hand in the evening.

He also said China apparently is ready to send some of its best musicians to the United States and Europe to study.

He also presented the Peking Conservatory a new, U.S.-made violin and the names of various U.S. violin makers. He noted Chinese violins are "like cigar boxes" and said it was amazing they could evoke beautiful music from such primitive instruments.

However, he said, the Chinese also make a good basic violin which he said he had found in many schools in England, but not in China.

Music, said Menuhin, "is somewhere between science and literature." He called his experience in China "a meeting of hearts, not a joining of facts."

Theatre groups left in financial limbo

OTTAWA (CP) — Professional non-profit theatre, music and dance companies — and all the performers and backstage help who work in them — enter the 1980s with more uncertainty than they have faced in the last 30 years of expansion in Canada's performing arts.

Pending a review of federal government arts and culture policy and settlement of political uncertainty in the Feb. 18 general election, arts organizations are treading water and wondering what the future holds.

Spending allocations for the 1980 summer and 1980-81 winter seasons are unlikely to be settled until a new House of Commons has been called into session and presented with the government's 1980-81 subsidy proposals.

The Canada Council, the main federal funding agency for the arts, has drafted a hypothetical budget based on a 4.3-per-cent increase in appropriations. This would give it less than $50 million to distribute to all the arts.

The National Arts Centre, which draws its $10-million subsidy separately from the government, is counting on an eight-per-cent increase, informants say. As the country's showcase theatre operating its own touring orchestra and English and French theatre companies, the centre is more or less a barometer for all the performing arts in Canada.

Despite the uncertain financial outlook, both the Stratford and Shaw festivals, the two biggest summer theatre operations, are planning ambitious 1980 programs.

Under Leslie Yeo as acting artistic director, the Shaw Festival overcame its 1978 deficit and ended 1979 in the black. But the Stratford Festival, with Robin Phillips away on a sabbatical during the crucial planning stage, ended 1979 with a serious deficit which must be overcome in 1980 if there is to be a 1981 festival.

The arts generally have been under financial restraint for three years or more, just when a larger proportion of the population — the children of the post-war baby boom — are reaching the age for greater enjoyment of leisure time and more outside interests.

Arts policy advisers say that not since the Massey Royal Commission was studying the arts, letters and social sciences 30 years ago has the demand for growth been greater and the financial fetters on growth more stringent.

The new year marks the 100th anniversary of the founding of the National Gallery, and there, too, the financial squeeze is becoming crippling.

The gallery no longer can afford to bring in the big international displays it once did with major shows drawn from such world-renowned galleries as the Louvre in Paris, and has been forced to recycle more of its own prints, drawings and photographs on its walls.

Director Shih Hsio-yen reported in her first review of the gallery's work in 1979 that inadequate space is beginning to result in damage to the National's priceless collection, particularly the Canadian works which must be shuttled in and out of storage.

The gallery was promised a new building for its centennial, but the cost — now pictured as probably more than $100 million — blocked work even before a start was made on the excavation.

The inquiry into arts policy launched by Secretary of State David MacDonald was to have been undertaken by a joint Senate-Commons committee travelling across the country during the summer of 1980.

A preliminary study leading to a government blue paper on arts policy has been tarted with Lou Applebaum of the Ontario Arts Council, on temporary duty with the federal government.

But whether the plan will proceed as MacDonald intended now depends on the outcome of the February general election.

Mini-child real doll

ATHENS (AFP) — One of the world's tiniest children is leading a normal life in an orphanage run by nuns, even though the nine year old is only 35 centimetres tall. Stamatoula has to wear doll dresses, but otherwise has an ordinary school career, her teachers say. However, her heart, lungs and stomach are so small that there are some fears she will not reach adulthood.

Enough uranium missing for bomb

By DAVID BURNHAM
New York Times

WASHINGTON — After an intensive three-month inquiry at a Tennessee nuclear facility, federal investigators have been unable to account for a missing quantity of highly enriched uranium that is large enough to make at least one atomic bomb. The investigators have recommended revoking the plant's operating licence.

The government investigators say they found no evidence of security violations at the Nuclear Fuel Services plant in Erwin, Tenn., which is essential to the production of uranium fuel for the U.S. Navy's nuclear fleet. But the investigators are unable to develop a plausible technical explanation for the plant's loss of more than 20 pounds of the uranium.

The precise amount is classified and could be considerably more than 20 pounds. The plant has been closed since September, when the loss was discovered.

According to several government officials, some of whom were present, the recommendation to revoke the licence of the Erwin plant was made at a closed meeting of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission on Dec. 14 by the staff of the Office of Nuclear Materials and Safeguards, which is responsible for protecting nuclear materials that can easily be fashioned into atomic bombs.

Long-time employees of the commission said they believed that if the recommendation was adopted it would be the first time the government had revoked the license of a major nuclear facility.

The Erwin plant is one of 11 commercial facilities in the United States licensed to handle amounts of highly enriched uranium or plutonium that are large enough to make into a bomb.

The highly enriched uranium and plutonium in these plants, some of which is being processed for use in experimental reactors such as the fast flux test facility in Hanford, Wash., have been the subject of increasing concern as the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and the public became aware of the hazards of the material falling into the hands of even a small terrorist group with access to a well-equipped machine shop.

Dr. Thomas B. Cochran, a long-time critic of nuclear power, contends that the inability of Erwin and other plants to keep track of the highly enriched uranium and plutonium entrusted to them "points to the impossibility of safeguarding special nuclear materials and being sure they have not been stolen from military or terrorist uses."

Cochran, a nuclear physicist with the Natural Resources Defence Council in Washington, charged further that the serious problems illustrated by the current investigation challenged the arguments for the development of the breeder reactor that would be powered mostly by plutonium. "It is clear from the problems at Erwin that we cannot move to the widespread use of the breeder without terrific risk," he said.

The recommendation to revoke Erwin's licence was based in part on the plant's chronic failures to meet government requirements for keeping track of the uranium. According to Nuclear Regulatory Commission records, the facility has been closed for re-inventory at least six times in the last 10 years after being unable to account for as much as 150 pounds of highly enriched uranium.

The Erwin plant is not the only uranium processing facility in the United States that has been a source of acute concern. In 1965, company managers of the Nuclear Materials and Equipment Corp., in Apollo, Pa., were unable to account for about 200 pounds of highly enriched uranium. That case is still under active investigation by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. No charges have been brought, but the Central Intelligence Agency and the Defence Intelligence Agency both concluded that the missing uranium had somehow been obtained by Israel.

Dimming televisions signal another power-short winter

By GEORGE BRODZKI

WARSAW (AP) — With stalled elevators and fading television screens, Poland is heading into another power-short Eastern European winter.

"Last year our commission made proposals to the government," legislator Marceli Faska said, as the country neared another record power deficit. "Unfortunately, nothing was done . . ."

Sporadic and largely unannounced blackouts have become common throughout much of Poland. Power is being cut to non-essential industries and Poles are getting extra Saturdays off to save more energy.

The Polish power troubles are reflected throughout communist Eastern Europe, from the Baltic to the Black Sea.

In neighboring Czechoslovakia, pedestrians ignore sudden blackouts that plunge all of central Prague into drakness.

Streetlights have been dimmed and extinguised from Bulgaria to East Germany this year. Hungarians have cut back street lighting and patrol officers turn off unneeded lights.

Romania is one of the drakest countries in central Europe, thanks to its cuts, and television sets there present wavering images blamed on reduced power levels.

Poland had a 457-megawatt electricity surplus as recently as 1974. It is expected to finish this year 2,816 megawatts short of what it planned to have.

Critics complain the government knew the electricity margin would disappear in 1975, but did nothing in time to avoid the present problems.

The weekly newspaper Polityka complained recently that the government approved new power plants in 1971 that could not go into operation until the next decade. Even then, it said, the government still approved expansion of the power-devouring cement, steel and chemical industries.

The government put all power producers under a single energy ministry in October, the newspaper said, to cut an "interministerial Gordian knot of nearsighted interests, lack of imagination and mismanagement."

Calling for a new way of thinking in Poland, the newspaper cited the ultramodern Skawina aluminum mill near Krakow.

"Modern it is, but to produce one ton of aluminum takes three times the energy needed by the old methods," it claimed.

"Inventors of prefabricated buildings should wonder why Polish prefabricates are three times as badly insulated as similar products abroad," the newspaper said. "They think they produce cheaply, but the total costs are much higher in the end."

Polish experts estimate the country could avoid shortages if its power plants could just avoid half their breakdowns.

But they say maintenance at the plants is delayed because of the shortages.

Power plants are also said to have received only 64 per cent of the spare parts they were due, and only 65 per cent of the maintenance scheduled for the first nine months of 1979.

Postwar Poland's energy production has been managed by seven different systems.

Polish authorities have responded to the power deficiency with a policy of temporary power cuts, many of them unannounced blackouts which have left people stranded in elevators and sitting before darkened television screens.

One Communist party official in northern Poland won public praise because people in his territory were given a quick extra blackout to warn them that a bigger one was coming.

Saving those old homes is show biz

By ROBERT TRAUTMAN

WOBURN, England (Reuter) — Owners of Britain's historic homes are fighting inflation by shedding their role of country gentlemen and becoming show business impresarios.

They are adding zoos and children's playgrounds to the vast lands surrouding their stately homes and opening almost everything to the public to help pay the rising costs of maintaining their estates.

Wobourn Abbey, the ancestral home of the Duke of Beford located 64 kilometres northwest of London, has done it with a flourish.

The Duke's imposing 17th-century mansion houses the world's largest private collection of Canalettos and works by Gainsborough, Rembrant, van Dyck and Holbein. It also was a 350-acre drive-through zoo with lions, tigers, giraffes, a monkey jungle, a dolphin pool, and a championship golf course laid out in the grounds.

Casting pretention aside, Woburn has been host to a Neil Diamond rock concert and a nudist convention. The truth is, Woburn and the hundreds of other stately homes that dot the British countryside need all the help they can get.

Heirs to the homes are hit with massive captial transfer taxes when the estate falls into their hands. And upkeep is enormous.

Even a modest mansion requires housekeepers, gardners and sometimes curators of fine art.

When the 13th Duke of Bedford inherited Woburn in 1947, death duties totalled almost $2 million. At today's rate against the British pound that works out to about $11 million U.S.

But the duke had a flare for show business; when he opened his house to the public he added a restaurant and souvenir shop, and later a picnic area, a bar and the wild animal kingdom. It costs $2 to tour the mansion and $7 per car to drive through the zoo.

The duke moved out in 1974 — to tax exile in France — and his son and family now live here, operating the complex.

Britain's recent governments have helped to ease the burden on the owners of historic homes. Help also has come from a group formed by the owner-occupiers, the Historic Homes Association.

A 1975 Finance Act exempts heirs from a transfer tax on a home if it is ruled of "outstanding historic and architectural interest" and is open to the public.

But under this provision, many of the country's excellent, though not "outstanding" homes are excluded. Also, the act did not exempt from death duties the considerable agricultural land which surrounds most stately homes, and which usually provides the income to support the house.

In many cases, some of this land has to be sold for taxes, stripping the stately home of much of its financial base.

George Howard, president of the 800-member Historic Homes Association, wants the capital transfer tax abolished outright.

"They (Britain's stately homes) are works of art in their own right, filled as they still are with pictures, furniture, tapestries, statuary, often in a glorious muddle, which presents a quite different emotional and esthetic experience from that which meets a visitor to a museum.

"This atmosphere derives in large measure from the fact that they are still occupied, in most cases, by the descendants of those who built them."

In arguing the case for tax abolition, Howard says the tax's $700,000 annual yield hardly justifies it as a revenue-raising instrument.

Musician, 18, latest defector

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — An 18-year-old musician from Bulgaria has become the latest artist to defect from a Communist state to the United States, U.S. government sources say.

The sources said the young man sought political asylum in mid-December and the request is likely to be granted. A Bulgarian embassy official also acknowledged that the horn player has sought asylum.

The youth's name will not be released unless he gives permission, a state department official said. His current whereabouts were not disclosed.

The youth was among 115 teenagers touring with the Pioneer Philharmonia of Sofia when he sought asylum after playing at a United Nations concert, sources said.

After visiting Mexico, the orchestra played in Washington's John F. Kennedy Centre for the Performing Arts Dec. 3 before moving to New York.

The last defections of Communist artists to the U.S. occurred during a three-week period in August and September when three Bolshoi Ballet dancers left the touring Russian company.

The youth played one of five horns with the Sofia orchestra, which staged a joint concert with the District of Columbia Youth Orchestra here.

Those election polls don't mean that much

By WALTER STEWART
FP News Service

OTTAWA — The Christmas lull was supposed to provide Canadians with a respite from the rigors of a winter election campaign. Instead, politicians of all parties are now working themselves into a frenzy over the results of the latest public opinion polls.

Polls always play a key role in elections, and this campaign is no exception. Indeed, two polls have already produced marked results.

A Gallup survey released early in December, which showed the Liberals 19 per cent ahead of the governing Conservatives, helped to bring about the election; it convinced the Liberals that they would win if they toppled the government.

A Carleton Journalism poll, conducted by students at the Ottawa university, and released Dec. 24, showed the Liberal lead to be even fatter — at 21 per cent. It created alarm and despondency among Conservative ranks, and will doubtless influence campaign policy.

Both polls were full of wet hay.

There has never been a Canadian election in which one major party led the other by 21 points; chances are there never will be such an election. The overwhelming Diefenbaker sweep of 1958 showed a spread of 20 points and there were similar spreads in the wartime elections of 1940 and 1917, but the usual difference between the two parties is from four to eight per cent.

When the gap widens enough to produce the kind of electoral avalanche represented by a 20-point spread, the signs are everywhere, and Canadians don't need a poll to tell them about the coming cataclysm. There are no such signs today, and it is clear that, by the time electors troop to the ballot box on Feb. 18, the spread between the parties will have narrowed to some more reasonable figure.

Then the pollsters will announce an abrupt shift in opinion, and proclaim their results to be accurate, as usual. In the meantime, party policy and even public opinion will be affected by the polls.

In this circular and self-fulfilling process, Canadians may want to bear in mind three crucial facts about such opinion samplings:

— They do not measure the electorate.

— They cannot predict election results.

— Their margin of error is greater than the usual shift in party votes.

Polls don't measure the electorate because they are a random sampling of Canadian opinion, and not all Canadians vote. In 1979, 76 per cent voted, but the usual figure is around 70 per cent.

The pollsters get around this difficulty by distributing the undecided voters as if they were decided. There is no justification for this process, but it does make for exciting results.

For example, the Carleton poll showed 26 per cent undecided, a result that should have dismissed the poll as meaningless. Since the sample covered 1,191 Canadians across the country, with 26 per cent removed, the poll was really only measuring the views of 882 people, or about three voters for every one of Canada's 282 ridings. At this rate, Carleton was showing a 38 per cent Liberal vote, 22 per cent Conservative and 11 per cent NDP. In more prosaic terms, 335 Canadians were declaring themselves Liberal, 229 were uncommitted, 194 were Conservatives and 132 were NDP.

Not too impressive. But with the undecideds cranked in, the poll not only has a "statistically reliable sample" — always a winsome winner — but produces an impressive result: 51 per cent Liberal, 30 per cent Conservative, 15 per cent NDP.

Statistically, the result is dubious.

Polls cannot predict election results because Canadians vote in ridings, not nationally. The party that wins the largest share of the vote may not form the government. In the last election, Liberals got 40 per cent of the votes and Conservatives 36 per cent, but the electoral system delivered more seats — and the government — to Joe Clark.

The Carleton poll in that election showed the Conservatives leading by 40.9 per cent, with the Liberals at 39.6 per cent and the NDP at 14.5 per cent. That was quite wrong, but the vagaries of the riding system provided a Tory win and allowed Carleton to claim that it "accurately forecast a minority Conservative government."

Quebec poll favors Liberals

MONTREAL (UPC) — The Progressive Conservative and the Social Credit parties trailed far behind the Liberals in a new poll on federal electoral prospects in Quebec published Wednesday in the Montreal Gazette and Le Soleil of Quebec City.

The Liberals held a commanding lead in the poll, conducted between Thursday and Saturday, collecting 58.2 percent of the popular vote, down narrowly from the 61.9 percent they won in last May's general election which brought Conservative Prime Minister Joe Clark to power.

The Conservatives slipped further to 8.6 percent, from the 13.2 percent last May, while the Social Credit party dropped to 3.3 percent from their previous 16 percent.

Only the New Democratic Party registered a gain, up at 8.6 percent from the 5.1 percent won in the last federal election.

Of the 939 persons interviewed by the Quebec Institute of Public Opinion, 15.9 percent said they were still undecided, 2.3 percent said they would not vote, 1.7 percent opted for "another party," and 1.4 percent said they would spoil their ballot.

The respondents were asked the question, "If the election were held today, which (federal) party would you vote for?"

Clark scheduled a national election for Feb. 18 after losing a lack of confidence vote in the House of Commons.

PQ denies poll alters strategy

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec government wasn't basing its strategy on a Radio-Canada public opinion poll when it decided to propose a second referendum before independence, says Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Claude Morin.

In an interview Wednesday with a Quebec City newspaper, Morin said the government had been thinking of holding a second referendum since last autumn, "even before the poll."

The minister, one of the chief architects of Parti Quebecois strategy, was commenting on reports that a poll conducted for Radio-Canada, the French-language network of the CBC, had been leaked to government strategists before they drafted the official question for the first referendum on independence.

The poll, which was made public only last Friday but was conducted in early December, well before the official question was tabled in the national assembly, showed about 65 per cent of respondents favored a second referendum.

The government eventually decided to ask Quebecers in the first referendum for a "mandate to negotiate" sovereignty-association, the PQ's term for political independence coupled with an economic common market with English Canada. Following negotiations with Ottawa, there would be a second referendum before any actual change in Quebec's constitutional status.

Marc Thibault, director of information at Radio-Canada, has confirmed that the results of the latest opinion poll were leaked to the government at least two weeks before they were broadcast.

The poll, conducted for Radio-Canada by the Centre de Recherche sur l'Opinion Publique, said 41 per cent of repsondents would give the government a mandate to try to negotiate sovereignty-association, while 31 per cent were opposed to such a mandate, with the rest undecided.

The results marked a significant change from a similar poll last February — especially in the number of undecided voters, who increased to 28 per cent in December from 18 per cent in February. The first poll found 51 per cent in favor of a mandate to negotiate, with 31 per cent opposed.

A rival poll sponsored last week by the Montreal Gazette and Le Soleil of Quebec City found that only 36.5 per cent of respondents favored a mandate to negotiate, with 47.2 per cent opposed and 16.3 per cent undecided or declining to answer.

Unlike the earlier efforts, the Gazette-Le Soleil poll was taken after the government had actually tabled its official referendum question.

Maureen chooses painting for Clark

EDMONTON (CP) — Want to know what Prime Minister Clark got for Christmas from his wife, Maureen McTeer?

Until now, Joe Acs, a Hungarian-born painter who moved here from Montreal 21 years ago, kept a tight lip on this particular state secret. Only his wife and three children knew.

The gift for Clark is an acrylic painting on masonite depicting the prime minister's birthplace at High River, south of Calgary.

Actually, it's a year late. Ms. McTeer asked Acs to paint it 18 months ago, but the death of the painter's father in Hungary shortly before Christmas 1978 postponed the work.

Acs, 43, went to High River last September without any reminder from Ms. McTeer, who saw his work in e- Edmonton art gallery and commissioned the painting.

Labor strife in '80

TORONTO (CP) — A top union official predicts confrontation between unions and management when they meet at the bargaining table next year.

Robert White, director of the United Auto Workers, said union members will demand increases to offset inflation at a time when the economy is soft.

Union officials estimate that settlements in the private sector may match the rate of inflation, but tightened government spending means wage increases in the public sector will probably trail inflation.

As well, union leaders will be under pressure to deliver big wage increases with the prospect of inflation of at least 10 per cent next year.

A balmy Yule — but nothing to gloat about

It was warm, almost shirt-sleeves, weather in Victoria over the holidays but other communities had the record-high temperatures.

The capital couldn't even have the usual holiday satisfaction of gloating over the chill in Eastern Canada. Their weather was almost as warm as here.

The Victoria weather office recorded a high of 9 degrees on Christmas Day — not far off the record of 10 set in 1943 — while both Abbotsford and Tofino had 10°.

On Boxing Day it rose to 10°, but Tofino was 11 along with Prince Rupert and Abbotsford. The three were tied as the warmest spots in B.C. and Canada.

The Victoria record-high temperature for Dec. 26 is 13 degrees, set in 1947.

All of Canada enjoyed mild temperatures during the holidays. Halifax had 8° on Boxing Day (5° on Christmas), while Toronto and Montreal hovered around 3 and 4 degrees on Boxing Day — well above their usual winter temperatures.

Tax break eaten up

BY CARL MOLLINS

OTTAWA (CP) — The New Year brings slight increases in take-home pay for most employees because of reductions in income tax. But the tax gain will be at least partly offset for many Canadians by higher deductions for unemployment insurance and pension premiums.

Monthly pensions, baby bonuses and benefits for the jobless also rise under federal welfare programs which, like income taxes, are adjusted Jan. 1 to offset last year's inflation.

These adjustments result from indexing formulas based on a 1979 inflation rate of about nine per cent — reducing taxes and raising social benefits by that margin.

But the experts are predicting consumer price increases of up to 11 per cent in 1980.

For a start, basic oil prices rise by $1 a barrel Jan. 1, which will add to the cost of heating oil and gasoline March 1 by up to one cent a litre — three to five cents a gallon — with natural gas going up by an equivalent margin.

Food prices also are predicted to rise sharply in the New Year. And there are more energy-price increases due next summer, regardless of which party wins the Feb. 18 federal election. Tax increases announced in the defeated Conservative budget of Dec. 11 also depend on the outcome of the election.

As if to underline the declining buying power of cash, the Royal Canadian Mint is making a 1980 penny that is lighter and thinner because the copper in a one-cent coin is costing more than one cent.

Income taxes are reduced because, under an indexing system introduced in 1974, exemptions rise by almost nine per cent and so do the income brackets subject to increasing tax rates under the graduated taxation system.

For example, the amount of an individual taxpayer's income free of tax rises by $240 in 1980 to $2,890, and the exemption for dependants by comparable margins.

The upshot is to reduce the average tax on a single person earning $15,000 a year by about $2.25 a week and on a $25,000-a-year married person with two children by about $8 a week.

The tax rates and saving vary according to income, personal allowances and the province of residence. Provincial taxes vary.

The resulting increase in take-home pay, however, is at least partly offset by bigger deductions for unemployment insurance of up to 34 cents more a week and for Canada Pension Plan of up to 43 cents extra a week. And a slight increase in taxable family allowances also adds a few pennies a week to tax deductions.

Earnings subject to unemployment insurance deductions rise to $290 a week in January from $265 in 1979. The rate of deductions remains the same — $1.35 for each $100 of employee earnings, $1.89 per $100 of payroll charged to the employer.

The result is that the employee's contribution rises by a maximum 34 cents a week to $3.92 from $3.58, on incomes of at least $290 a week.

At the same time, unemployment insurance benefits for the 750,000 jobless rise to a maximum $174 a week from $159 weekly, an increase of $15 a week for those who have lost top-paying jobs.

Payroll deductions for the Canada Pension Plan — Quebec has its own equivalent program — go up by an average of about 42 cents a week in the New Year as benefits also rise.

Insurable earnings rise to $13,100 a year from $11,700, the portion free of deductions to $1,300 from $1,100. The result is that both employer and employee contributions increase to $212.40 annually each, up from $190.80 in 1979, an increase of $21.40 each.

Self-employed persons pay the double amount of $424.80.

CPP benefits also increase to a maximum $244.44 a month for those who retire in 1980 from the top $218.06 paid to those who retired in 1979.

All CPP benefits increase by nine per cent. For example, those who began collecting in 1979 get an increase to $237.69 a month

Old-age security pensions, paid from general federal revenues to everybody 65 and older and to some spouses of pensioners, go up in January in line with a system that increases benefits every three months in pace with the inflation rate.

The basic old-age security payment to the 2.2 million Canadians 65 or older rises to $182.42 a month in January from $179.02. A year earlier, the monthly benefit was $167.21.

The old-age guaranteed income supplement, paid in full to about 400,000 needy pensioners with no other income and partially to 750,000 others in some need, goes up to $149.76 a month from $146.97. It was a maximum $137.28 a year earlier.

That means a single pensioner getting the full supplement receives a total $332.18 monthly starting in January, an increase from $325.99 late in the old year and $304.49 in the first three months of 1979.

The supplement is lower for married couples, but they also get an increase. Married couples, including a spouse between 60 and 65 who qualifies, get a maximum $306.94 each a month, up from $301.22 in late 1979 and from $281.36 each at the beginning of last year.

Monthly family allowance cheques — the baby bonus — paid to mothers of children under 18 go up in January to an average $21.80 from $20.

Baby bonus payments vary by provincial option in Alberta and Quebec according to the age or number of children in a family. But they average $21.80 a child.

Special allowances for foster parents, welfare agencies and other government agencies caring for children go up to $30.51 from $27.99 a child per month.

Family allowances are a taxable benefit for taxpaying members of a family that receives them. This means, for example, a slight increase in 1980 taxes for many fathers whose wives receive the increased monthly cheques.

However, the resulting $21.60 increase in annual taxable income per child under 18 is more than offset for lower-income families by the inflation-indexing increase in the child tax credit first introduced last year.

The maximum child tax credit for 1980, which can be claimed in the spring of 1981, rises by $20 to $238 for each child under 18, on incomes up to about $210 a week.

Even foes say Joe tougher

BY ROD CURRIE

OTTAWA (CP) — Although he was tempered by only six months in the office of prime minister, it is a somewhat different Joe Clark who leads the Progressive Conservatives into his general election campaign.

Supporters say he is surer, more self-confident — that the job has toughened him.

Even opponents allow that he has learned a lot, although they chuckle that it was mostly through his mistakes.

Always at his self-assured best in the Commons, Clark now reflects an easier, less fidgety manner in public, even in such testing and tedious situations as receiving-line duty, notorious for fluttery small-talk.

Friends and supporters are heartened, and claim to perceive a greater public appreciation of the qualities they see in Clark — management skills, an ability to listen, to delegate and to lead.

Maybe. But the Joe Clark "turkey" jokes persist. The image of the gangling, somewhat wooden adolescent sticks.

From the start of his public career Clark has suffered an image problem as persistent as eczema.

Friends lament that he is ridiculed for his youth rather than praised for becoming the youngest prime minister in Canada's history.

If it hurts, it doesn't show. A close friend says he accepts it as part of public life.

But the jokes — "Joe Clark keeps a turkey in his office for spare parts" — are said to enrage his wife Maureen McTeer, a pclitically-aware law graduate who has occasionally struck back at the media.

And if Clark has a policy for overcoming it, it apparently is nothing more than sheer hard work and persistence, by which he finally shook the Joe Who label applied when he surprisingly won the party leadership in 1976.

By the time the campaign for the May 22 election rolled around Clark was ready to pronounce Joe Who dead. "I'm ready to be prime minister," he said.

Already, at age 39, he had then been leading the party for close to four years and finally was emerging as a major personality on the political scene.

It's been an uphill grind for the lad from Alberta's rolling foothills country who first talked about being prime minister back in his native High River at age 17.

Now, with the demands of that office, Clark must budget his sparse free time between family and friends, and mostly he puts family first. An evening at the movies with Maureen, or frolicking with daughter Catherine, 3, are treasured moments of relaxation away from official duties.

When they entertain non-political friends these days it is usually at a rather informal dinner party at Harrington Lake, the prime ministerial retreat in Quebec's Gatineau Hills.

"He simply thinks he wouldn't be himself," says a close friend.

Even his brief stay in office before facing a new election seems to have dispelled fears that he would not have the stamina for the job.

"He can stand the pace," says an aide. "He likes being stretched."

"He is comfortable in the job," says a friend who admits to a pro-Clark bias. "Power has increased his confidence."

In his youth Clark made an unsuccessful stab at law school, worked briefly in journalism, travelled in Europe, then turned to politics in earnest.

He became an MP in 1972 and triumphed in the Conservative leadership convention against 11 others in 1976.

Television in the Commons, introduced in October, 1978, helped Clark and he made the most of it. Debate and sharp questioning gave the then-opposition leader a chance to show himself at his best, sparring with former prime minister Pierre Trudeau.

Even the Joe Who putdown of a Toronto newspaper headline the day after he won the party leadership was turned to advantage. From that level, he had nowhere to go but up — and he did.

His family ran a weekly newspaper in High River and he could have gone into that business, but he got the political bug early.

At college he hit the books and worked free time with the party, writing pamphlets for the Diefenbaker government and leaving little time for the college whirl of parties and dances.

Friends of that era say he kept a cluttered room, devoured junk food and indulged a passion for Coca-Cola, still his favorite drink.

All this was in sharp contrast to his neat-as-a-pin appearance and his continuing flair for political organization and planning.

When he came to Ottawa he worked in the office of former opposition leader Robert Stanfield, his predecessor as party chief.

Out of the public eye, he likes to slump reading — heavy stuff, and detective yarns for relaxation — or go to the movies. He has a shocking appetite, particularly for desserts, but does not smoke and drinks sparingly.

His ease with French is one of his greatest assets. Out campaigning, he can cat-nap on airplanes and in car back seats.

Party workers and reporters tend to slip easily into a first-name relationship and Clark doesn't mind. He puts great emphasis on his small-town, grass-roots connections, saying:

"I consider it a matter of some significance that people will come to me and call me Joe." They do it still, even after he became prime minister.

Indeed, he seems to draw great inner strength from his rather unsophisticated background and the inability of others to size him up.

"I knew they were underestimating me," he said after he won the party leadership in what others had stamped as a futile battle.

He could have said the same thing after his first bid to the prime minister of Canada.

Brazil: an uneasy racial mix

RIO DE JANEIRO (Reuter) — On the surface, Manoel Gomes is a typical, moderately well-off citizen of Rio who enjoys a Saturday night's drinking in one of the city's many cheap bars.

Usually the other drinkers are of mixed African and white ancestry. After a few beers Manoel, white and Portuguese-born, will confide with some embarrassment that his wife is black.

His discomfort reflects the uneasy relationship between whites and non-whites in a country officially without racial discrimination.

Outside Africa, Brazil has the largest black population of any country in the world and is supposed to be proud of its African cultural heritage.

But despite the official view that Brazil is a multi-racial society, it is clear that whites virtually monopolize the positions of power and decisions while black and mixed-race people are second-class citizens.

Non-white leaders recently began a campaign to expose Brazil's widespread but quiet discrimination and to call for equal opportunities for the country's non-white population, estimated at almost half of its115 million people.

Orlando Fernandes, president of the Black Culture Research Institute, says non-whites live on the periphery of society and are discriminated against in education, jobs and housing.

Many organizations like Fernandes' include the words "black" or "African" in their titles. They usually refer to all non-whites as blacks or Afro-Brazilians.

Fernandes, an airline technician, cites his own case as an example of discrimination. He says he passed an exam for flight engineer but was rejected with excuses about his health.

He and other campaigners say non-whites have only two of the 487 federal parliamentary seats, five per cent of the military commissions and three per cent of civil service appointments and college places.

Fernandes says Parliament will eventually be given a proposed anti-discrimination law aimed at assuring jobs for qualified non-whites in all sectors of government.

Racial tensions are almost non-existent and no race laws are on the statute books. Discrimination often is subtle.

Many "Position vacant" advertisements demand a "good appearance" — usually code words for "whites only."

Brazilians say the lighter the shade, the better the chances of getting a lower-paid white-collar job.

People also say that while half-caste women are often highly praised for their beauty, their main chance for non-working-class employment is as professional dancers of the ever-popular samba. Few marry into the exclusive white establishment.

Doormen at fashionable clubs and restaurants often turn away non-whites, while the custodians of luxury apartment complexes frequently insist that visiting non-whites, no matter what their social status, use the service elevator.

Occasionally an offended person goes to court, but such cases are long and expensive and, when not dismissed for lack of evidence, rarely draw more than minimal fines.

Last year, however, a blatant act of racial discrimination in Sao Paulo, Brazil's second-largest city, sparked the biggest non-white demonstration in the country since slavery's abolition in 1888.

Four non-white athletes were turned away from the posh Tiete Regatta Club upon arrival for a sports event. Their white team-mates were admitted.

A few days later 5,000 demonstrators in the hurriedly-formed Black Movement Against Racial Discrimination staged a march through the city centre.

This shocked many Brazilians, who had assumed that their country really was the racial paradise that government leaders claim.

Chinese activist jailed

PEKING (UPI) — A Chinese court has sentenced a woman construction worker, the nation's best known activist, to two years in prison for making a false rape charge and violating public order, which included organizing street marches by poor people.

The official Xinhua news agency said the Peking intermediate court imposed the Christmas Eve sentence on Fu Yuehua, 34.

There had been no announcement beforehand of resumption of the trial, which had been closely watched by foreign journalists in Peking. The trial had been in adjournment since Oct. 17.

The official news agency said Miss Fu, a construction worker, was convicted of bringing a false rape charge in 1972 against the Communist Party official in charge of the construction company where she worked.

She also was accused of violating public order for organizing three street demonstrations by impoverished Peking workers in January. She was arrested shortly after they occurred.

Soviets revive chistka in pre-Olympics purge

By KEVIN KLOSE
Washington Post

MOSCOW — One recent evening a Moscow housewife standing in a long line at her local food store lost patience and began doing what Muscovites frequently do. She complained about shortages.

Suddenly a man stepped out of the crowd, seized her and forced the woman out of the store. She was bundled off to a local stationhouse, where to her astonishment she found about 30 other shoppers who had been seized in other stores for complaining. The stunned Soviets were harangued by an official for "spreading rumors and falsehoods about Soviet life" on the eve of the 1980 Moscow Olympics.

When the woman left, she discovered the authorities had another unpleasant surprise for her: her internal passport, with its vital permission allowing her to live in Moscow, had been freshly stamped requiring an official review of her conduct in six months to be sure she behaves herself and should not be expelled from the capital.

The Moscow Olympics chistka, or purge, is gathering momentum in the Soviet capital as authorities ready themselves for the 1980 summer games, when an estimated 300,000 foreign tourists, including some 20,000 Americans, are expected here.

The Soviets, intent upon presenting their society as an ideal unmatched elsewhere in the world, are planning draconian measures to "cleanse the city," in the words of one person, of people who the regime feels are "undesirable." They are also taking steps to sharply limit the access by Muscovites to Westerners in general and Americans in particular. In recent weeks the following examples have surfaced here:

—Some Soviet school teachers are telling their students that American Olympic tourists will offer poisoned chewing gum to Russian children. Some teachers are said to have warned that if not poisoned, the chewing gum will contain bacteria meant to spread disease and infection. The students have been warned sternly to avoid any contact with foreign tourists and athletes.

—Directors of factories and enterprises in Moscow have been ordered by local party officials to compile lists by April 1 of drunkards, psychotics, disorderly persons and Jews who have applied to emigrate, so the Communist Party can decide who will be sent out of the city during the games, which open July 19 and close in early August.

—Schools are requiring students to fill out forms specifying where they will spend the months of June, July, and August. Those who plan to be in the city then will be sent to summer camps away from Moscow.

—Human-rights activisits and dissidents believe the KGB secret police will mount tight surveillance and, possibly, effective house arrest of certain well known dissident figures, similar to the house arrests made during President Nixon's visit here in 1974.

—Adult vacation spas and rest homes and childrens' summer camps throughout the country apparently are being specially prepared to handle Muscovites who are to be sent out of the city during the games.

Beyond its usual pugnacious, anti-Western, anti-capitalist propaganda attacks, there is nothing to be seen here in the official press of these measures. But reliable, unofficial sources unfailingly assert the veracity of these pre-Olympic preparations. They sardonically use the Russian word chistka or "cleaning" to describe what is going on. It is a word with dread connotations for Soviets, for it is the term used in naming the Stalinist purges that swept millions to death in slave labor camps beginning in the late 1930s.

The 1977 Soviet constitution, which party leader Leonid Brezhnev likes to hail as one of the supreme achievements of his 15-year reign, guarantees a place to live for all Soviet citizens. But where a Russian lives is tightly controlled by the state through extensive bureaucratic checks on individual freedom that center on the internal passport, which every Russian is required to carry from age 16.

Thus, the threat to the housewife — undoubtedly to be repeated many times between now and the summer — falls into a gray administrative area where internal Soviet security organizations exercise virtually unlimited power over everyone.

The same gray area seems to cover the lists of "undesirables" now being drawn up by every Moscow organization. According to knowledgeable sources, the lists are to include as "disorderly persons" any citizen who has had at least two court appearances of any kind, whether or not the incidents resulted in acquittal or dismissal. The cateogry of "psychotics" is thought to include not only those who may have spent time in a mental insitution or been treated for mental illness, but anyone else the officials deem to be unreliable.

A further category will be used to name any other "suspicious" or worrisome citizens who do not fall cleanly into the other definitions. Thus, the potential numbers could reach into the tens of thousands.

It is being said here that virtually every repository for Soviets - jails, prisons, psychiatric wards, rest homes, sanatoriums, and [illegible] in the Moscow area will be specially cleared and readied solely for Muscovites to be sent from the city. The undesirables will be given 24- or 48-day vacations and if space in rest homes runs out, others will be dispatched on official business trips, known as komanderovki, elsewhere in the U.S.S.R.

It is also thought that measures are being organized to bar the city to any provincial Russians without specific travel permission to enter Moscow, either by establishing a new pass system or simply shutting down incoming commuter bus and train service. About 1 million peasants and other country folk are estimated to be in Moscow any day during the summer months, on trips from outlying regions in search of meat and domestic goods unavailable in the countryside.

The Soviets used similar measures once before, during the 1957 international youth festival here during Nikita Khrushchev's leadership. That event, the first time in Soviet history so many foreigners had been allowed at one time in the capital, was accompanied by tight police control. Muscovites seen talking with foreigners were seized and questioned.

The Lord is my Shepherd

I shall not want

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures

He restoreth my soul

He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake

Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death

I will fear no evil

For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff
they comfort me

before me in the presence of mine
enemies

Thou anointest my head with oil

My cup runneth over

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

A time to check on storage crops

With Christmas festivities over and an hour or so to spare, the home gardener is pleased to have the opportunity for checking garden crops in storage and roots spending the winter in a shed or coldframe.

To some this regular checking is a nuisance. We have plenty, they say, so what does it matter if one or two potatoes or apples go rotten?

The experienced gardener looks upon it as a good investment, comparing it to the time and effort expended to produce these valuable foods, and to the market prices of the same crops today. They also realize how quickly rot can spread.

It is worth doing the job carefully, removing anything which is in a questionable state and using it immediately.

Bruised apples can be included in meals over the next week. Pears listed for January use will need a few days at room temperature to improve texture and flavor. Try a few this week to determine their condition.

On a mild day the coldframes should be checked.

Frames containing growing winter vegetables have needed a lot of ventilation in the mild temperature of the past few weeks. Continue this until the temperature drops to normal for this time of year, but still ventilate by placing pieces of 2-by-4 under the corners of the covers from possibly 11 a.m. until 2 p.m.

Fresh air is as important as protection from the elements to plants in a cold frame or a cold greenhouse.

Coldframes containing chrysanthemums and other roots have had permanent ventilation for most of the past month.

These may need a careful check since soil water could have seeped into the frames and saturated the stored roots. Under these conditions it is often necessary to remove some of the wet sand and replace it with dry which has been kept under cover.

If the mild temperatures have encouraged long growths to develop, cut these off as they will not be suitable for spring cuttings.

Check gladiolus corms and dahlia roots stored in a shed, removing any rotted or damaged.

The dahlia roots may be too damp after recent rains and high humidity, especially if the earth floor has become saturated.

On the other hand, a concrete floor could result in low humidity and the smaller tubers showing a tendency to shrivel. In this case a wide container of water nearby may help supply more moisture to the air.

Badly shrivelled tubers are useless, but those only slightly dried can be placed in water for a day or so, then dried and returned to storage.

Should skies clear and frosty nights return, coldframe covers will need lowering by mid-afternoon, and raised again on blocks as soon as the frost clears in the morning. The same applied to the unheated greenhouse with food crops growing.

During January there should be at least two checks of fruits and vegetables in storage, and weekly checks during February. Use as much as possible of stored foods during the next four weeks because deterioration increases after mid winter.

Police constable clings to speeding culprits

OTTAWA (CP) — A city police constable survived a wild ride on the outside of a car whose occupants he was attempting to arrest Wednesday night with the result that a man has been charged with attempted murder.

Charged was 22-year-old Mark Harris of Old Chelsea, Que.

Constable Bill Cicalo became involved when he approached a car with two occupants that he and his partner in a police cruiser had ordered to the side of the road.

Detective Staff Inspector John McCombie explained later that when Cicalo opened the door of the car and asked the driver to step out, the driver stepped on the gas. But while the wheels were spinning on a patch of ice, Cicalo reached in to try and take the keys from the ignition.

It was then the car took off with Cicalo trapped between the open door and the side of the car with the driver's head firmly gripped in a headlock.

After a chase through city streets involving up to 14 police cars at speeds exceeding 120 kilometres an hour, the car rammed into a parked car, hurling Cicalo an estimated 10 metres onto the hood of another parked vehicle.

Picking himself up, Cicalo rejoined the chase in a trailing squad car, eventually chasing down the occupants of the car on foot after they had been stopped by a roadblock and arresting them.

Loto Canada will have a new role: chairman

VANCOUVER (CP) — Loto Canada will continue indefinitely but in a very different role, Don Hamilton, new chairman of the board of the Crown corporation, said Wednesday.

Hamilton, a Vancouver broadcaster and former Progressive Conservative Party officer, was appointed last Friday to take over from Charles Keating of Dartmouth, N.S., whose term expired Dec. 16, and Guy Cousineau, a career civil servant who retired when his term as president of Loto Canada expired.

Hamilton's first duties are to supervise the wind-down of the million-dollar federal lottery which holds its last draw Monday night.

He said in an interview his new job will involve the administration of any undistributed prize money and the receipt and administration of $24 million a year from the provinces.

Under the arrangement that sees the federal government leaving the lottery field, the 10 provinces will pay to Ottawa $24 million in 1979 dollars "indexed in perpetuity" for the lottery franchise.

Keating, commenting on Hamilton's appointment, said the dismantling of Loto Canada was a mistake which would put hundreds out of work.

Hamilton said the corporation's staff of 150 would be cut to 25 after Jan. 18 and to eight in April. He said he expected most of Loto Canada's employees would be absorbed by the provinces' lottery operations.

Hamilton said he would have offices in Ottawa and Vancouver and commute several times a month. He said he had not yet negotiated a salary for the job.

Hamilton was campaign manager in B.C. for the Conservatives in the last federal election but is not involved in the current campaign, he said.

Border gay-ban back again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawyers of the U.S. justice department lawyers have told the Immigration and Naturalization Service it must change its policy and enforce a statutory ban on the admission of homosexual foreigners into the United States.

The decision was criticized by Charles Brydon, co-executive director of the National Gay Task Force in New York. Brydon said he was "very disappointed" in the ruling and that he hopes government officials will meet homosexual-rights groups before moving to enforce the ban.

Justice department lawyers sent David Crosland, acting director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, a memo saying the immigration service "is statutorily required to enforce the exclusion of homosexual aliens" under the 1952 McCarran-Walter Act.

The decision reversed a position taken in August when the government said it would no longer use homosexuality as a reason for denying aliens entry into the United States.

That policy was announced after U.S. Surgeon-General Julius Richmond said the Public Health Service does not consider homosexuality a "mental disease or defect."

Richmond said that beginning Aug. 2, government physicians would "no longer issue medical holds on aliens suspected solely of being homosexual."

The Public Health Service announced its policy change this summer after a court challenge by a London antique restorer who arrived at the San Francisco airport wearing a "Gay Pride" button. In reply to an immigration official, the man said he was a homosexual. He was barred from entering the United States.

That decision was reversed when Richmond issued his directive to health service doctors.

The immigration service temporarily halted efforts to keep foreign visitors thought to be homosexuals out of the United States, pending a justice department review of the legal issues involved.

But Crosland said Wednesday he was advised by justice department lawyers to enforce the law.

Immigration officials do not know exactly how many foreigners have been kept out of the United States because they were believed to be homosexual.

Jupiter moon raises hopes of finding outer space life

Scientist suspects there's life in Europa's frozen sea

WASHINGTON (AP) — Europa, a moon of the planet Jupiter, may be the most likely place in the solar system to search for some form of life, says a scientist who has studied data from the Voyager 2 spacecraft.

Richard Hoagland, a consultant to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, says the Voyager data indicates that beneath the surface of Europa is an ocean of water, "the prime prerequisite for life as we know it."

Hoagland, writing in the January issue of Star Sky magazine, bases his theories on information gathered by Voyager during its July flybys of Jupiter and its four moons.

"Only three other objects in the solar system have ever been seriously suggested as abodes of life — Mars, Jupiter and Saturn's moon Titan," he said. "Spacecraft investigations of all three of these bodies in recent years have cast doubt on life existing on any of them."

"The Voyager 2 findings leave little doubt that Europa is covered with a crust of ice perhaps five miles thick that envelops a global ocean possibly 60 miles deep," he wrote.

He also suggests that at one time, conditions on the Jovian moon were such that the ocean was free of ice.

"Jupiter was once a miniature sun according to our current concepts of solar system formation," he said.

"It only lasted a short time — a few million years at most — but for that brief period Europa probably basked in energy as rich as any streaming toward earth today from the sun."

That was long enough, Hoagland said, "for molecules that are suspected life-process precursors to be created as they have been in thousands of earthly laboratory simulations. The life precursor molecules produced during Europa's first few million years could have continued to evolve under a canopy of ice, sustained by internal heat sources."

Europa looks like a giant cracked eggshell in pictures relayed back to earth from Voyager 2. Crisscrossing its yellow surface are hundreds of dark cracks, some of which seem to be as wide as 48 kilometres and as long as 3,200 kilometres.

The next chance scientists will have to get a further look at Europa is in the mid-1980s when NASA launches its Galileo satellite into orbit around Jupiter. The satellite is to pass repeatedly within a few hundred kilometres of Europa.

"The real excitement will arrive with the first human expedition to Europa," Hoagland said. "Only by landing there will we discover if Europa is another earth which somehow died before it had a chance."

AFTER-STORM CALM reveals three of 14 boats ripped from moorings and grounded at Pillar Point south of San Francisco in Sunday's wild Pacific storm — one of worst to hit U.S. west coast in a decade. Some 400,000 northern California customers were without electricity during the height of the storm, which weakened as it pushed through northeastern Nevada, southern Idaho and northern Utah.

Dixy Lee faces $8.8M flood bill

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — The state Department of Emergency Services reports raging flood waters that inundated areas of Western Washington last week resulted in damages estimated at $8.8 million.

The figures will be passed to Gov. Dixy Lee Ray who must decide whether to ask President Carter to declare a state of emergency.

Cyclone combo clubs island

DURBAN, South Africa (Reuter) — At least 40 people are feared killed after two cyclones ravaged the Indian Ocean island of Mauritius, returning tourists said today.

They said cyclones Claudia and Claudette flattened homes and caused major crop damage on Sunday, with winds gusting up to 255 kilometres per hour.

All telephone links with the island were cut.

Witness Tony Lanza told reporters in Durban: "It was a terrifying experience.

"Conditions in some areas are chaotic, and it is going to take months to repair a lot of the damage.

"I am sure it will be another three months or so before electricity is properly restored all over the island."

A Durban couple said they saw hundreds of homes flattened and vast stretches of crops, including sugar, destroyed.

Mike and Cathy Greenham said the popular yacht haven of Grande Baie was devastated.

"Yachts had been literally picked up by the storm and thrown on the beach and the sea was scattered with drowned dogs and goats, obviously blown into the water," Greenham said.

Roasted bird fouls rail line

LONDON (AP) — A passing train roasted a bird on a power line Wednesday, causing a delay for hundreds of passengers on the London-Glasgow railway line.

The bird, a kestrel, was perched on a 25,000-volt overheard line, and died in a blinding flash when the train passed beneath and caused a short circuit.

Blondell in 1978 film, The Champ

Joan Blondell dies at 73

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Joan Blondell, the brassy but good-hearted heroine of comedies and musicals who once called herself "the fizz on the soda," has died of leukemia after a stage and screen career spanning five decades.

Blondell, 73, died Christmas morning at St. John's Hospital, where she had been ill for several weeks, said Flora Marks, the actress's business manager.

The daughter of a New York City vaudeville couple, Rose Joan Blondell launched her career in the spotlight at age three, when she joined the family act.

She parlayed her first major Broadway success — Maggie the Magnificent opposite James Cagney — into a 1930 contract with Warner Bros. and made so many films that she later had trouble remembering them all.

In her early roles, with such movies as Public Enemy, she was stereotyped as a gangland moll, but her song-and-dance talents were displayed in Gold Diggers of 1933 and Footlight Parade.

Although she once said all she ever wanted was "to have one husband and one house and one garden and a lot of children," Blondell once had homes in New York and Hollywood — and was married three times.

Her first marriage, in 1933, was to cinematographer George Barnes. They had one son, Norman, and were divorced three years later.

Shortly after, she married singer-actor Dick Powell, father of her daughter Ellen. They divorced in 1944, and in 1947 she wed showman Michael Todd. That marriage ended in 1950.

Blondell said she shed her brash, young image with the 1945 film, A Tree Grows in Brooklyn, when Elia Kazan "let me have a moment of two of tenderness, of maturity, that nobody had ever given me before."

In 1951, she was nominated for an Oscar for her supporting role in The Blue Veil. She went on to play a variety of character roles, both in films and on television.

For two seasons, starting in 1968, she was the bawdy saloonkeeper, Lottie, on ABC's Here Come the Brides. In 1972, she had a featured role on the NBC series Banyon.

In 1978, she appeared in the film Grease. She also was nominated for a Golden Globe award for her performance last year in John Cassavetes' Opening Night.

Queen salutes peacemakers

LONDON (Reuter) — The Queen in her Christmas message paid tribute to Commonwealth leaders for laying the basis of the Rhodesia peace settlement signed in London last week.

The Christmas message was sent to Rhodesia for the first time since former prime minister Ian Smith's unilateral declaration of independence from Britain in 1965.

Much of the Queen's message was devoted to the subject of the International Year of the Child.

She said 1979 was "an exceptionally difficult and tragic year" for many families and children, particularly in Southeast Asia.

"The situation," she said, "created a desperately serious challenge and I'm glad to know that so many people in the Commonwealth have responded . . .

"It seems the greater the need of children, the more people rise to the occasion."

The Queen is spending the Christmas holidays at Windsor Castle with 32 house guests and family members.

Pol Pot quits as premier

BANGKOK (AP) — The ousted Cambodian government announced today that Pol Pot has stepped down as its premier, but sources said he will become chairman of a military group aiming to drive Vietnamese forces from the country.

Vietnamese forces invaded Cambodia a year ago and captured Phnom Penh, removing the Pol Pot government and installing one headed by Heng Samrin. Cambodians loyal to Pol Pot have been fighting a guerrilla war since.

Replacing Pol Pot as premier of the ousted government is Khieu Samphan, the former president, who will be assisted by two deputy premiers — Ieng Sary and Son Sen. The sources said Pol Pot will be chairman of a "Supreme Committee of the National Armies of Democratic Kampuchea (Cambodia)."

There were reports of such changes earlier, but they were not confirmed until the announcement by the guerrilla forces' clandestine radio station, which was monitored here.

Last fall, Pol Pot promised additional freedoms to anyone joining a united front against the Vietnamese and the new Phnom Penh government.

The best-organized and largest number of Pol Pot troops are believed to be along the Thai-Cambodian border. Tens of thousands of Cambodian civilians are also there — believed to have followed the guerrilla fighters or to have been forced there by soldiers retreating westward from the Vietnamese.

The broadcast said the appointments were temporary until elections can be held under UN supervision.

The guerrilla government claims to have inflicted 70,000 casualties on the Vietnamese between January and September.

Pol Pot's regime was regarded as one of the most brutal in history. Cambodia's population is estimated to have dropped from seven million to 4.5 million during social upheaval and civil war since Pol Pot's Communist forces took over in 1975.

'Red Rudi' dies in tub

AARHUS, Denmark (CP) — Rudi Dutschke, known as Red Rudi when he was a leader of leftist West German students in the 1960s, drowned in a bathtub at the home of friends here, police said.

Police said Dutschke, 39, either struck his head on the edge of the bathtub Tuesday or suffered an attack of epilepsy, a preliminary examination by forensic doctors showed.

Dutschke was visiting friends he made while teaching history at the University of Aarhus in the early 1970s.

When he died Dutschke, was a man forgotten and jibed at by his own followers.

Red Rudi, the fiery student leader who spearheaded countless demonstrations that inspired anti-establishment youth during the politically turbulent 1960s, had sought in vain to carve out a new left-wing formation in the 1970s.

A spokesman for the West German environmentalist Green party, in which Dutschke had placed much of his hopes, speculated that he might have died of a stroke as an after-effect of bullet wounds received in 1968.

Dutschke, the son of a postal worker, was severely wounded in the head on April 11, 1968, in a West Berlin street. The attack led to off student riots in West Germany.

After his recovery from head wounds, Dutschke tried to settle in Britain but was expelled in early 1971 for alleged subversive activities. He then took up a post here at Aarhus University.

Datsun recalls 295,000 units

DETROIT (AP) — More than 295,000 Datsun automobiles built between 1975 and 1979 have been recalled because of a potential safety defect related to cold weather driving, the automaker announced Wednesday.

Nissan U.S.A., which manufactures Datsun cars, said it is voluntarily recalling 295,710 of its 1975-79 280-ZX and 1977-79 810 model cars to correct the potential safety problem.

Officials at Nissan's Carson, Calif., headquarters said in an announcement released in Detroit that subzero temperatures, coupled with high moisture from the cars' blow-by ventilation system, could offset throttle system components, causing a prolonged high idle.

A potentially hazardous situation could occur if the cars are driven on snow- or ice-covered roads before the vehicle is fully warmed up, the company said. But company officials said no accidents related to the problem have been reported.

Datsun dealers will perform the necessary checks and installation at no charge. The company said an initial supply of parts will reach dealers in cold climate states by early January, 1980, and the rest of the country by mid-February.

SAGGING SAPLINGS on Trans-Canada Highway divide between Tillicum and Admirals are mark of vandals who went on a rampage Christmas Eve. Highways officials say the vandalism is one of a number of cases that have plagued highway crews in recent months. "I guess there is someone out there who doesn't like the shrubs there," a spokesman said. "Or maybe it's a concerned taxpayer who doesn't like to see his taxes spent in such a way."

Gold price soars past $500 mark

Times News Services

Gold soared to more than $510 U.S. ($587 Cdn.) an ounce in Europe today amid concern over a reported Soviet military buildup in Afghanistan, the continuing U.S. Embassy siege in Tehran, and higher oil prices.

The U.S. dollar was lower almost everywhere.

In New York, the Canadian dollar was down 3-100 at $0.8506.

Gold was up as much as $36 from pre-holiday prices in Europe, following the metal's surge through the $500 barrier in New York on Wednesday.

In London, gold opened at a record $507.50, moved to an all-time high fixing of $508.75 and by noon was trading at $511. This compared with $485.50 at the close Monday.

Zurich, Europe's biggest bullion mart, also saw the price start at $507.50 and move to $511 by mid-day, up from $475 last Friday, the last trading session in the Swiss financial centre before a long Christmas holiday.

In Paris, where prices are inflated by a four-per-cent govtax, bullion hit a record $523.96 an ounce at the morning fixing.

"While the price may rise some more, the gold game is becoming more and more dangerous with these unbelievable prices," a dealer in Zurich said.

"Middle East oil states are still buying heavily, but they're also selling for the profits. So while the small speculator may be right in buying now in the short term, he could well be hurt in the medium term."

Swiss gold dealers said the "little people" have jumped on the gold bandwagon — usually a sign prices may go down.

"But the market now has become so big that this time the small investor and speculator may be right," a dealer said. "In fact, we think the gold market now has become so big that it is impossible to kill it."

Both London and Zurich dealers said buying orders were "pouring in" with demand for gold extremely heavy. Many orders came from Middle East investors and speculators.

The price of silver was up as today's basic price of 1,000-ounce certificates in the Victoria area, according to the Scotiabank, were $27.75 U.S. bid per troy ounce and $28.75 asked. Last Friday's prices were $24.20 and $24.60.

The price of gold is more than double its $226.375-a-troy-ounce close in London at the end of 1978, and almost $400 more than its the $134.50-an-ounce close at the end of 1976. The old record for gold was $496, set during the European trading day Dec. 20.

"Nobody wants to sell, and there's a general feeling gold's going higher," said one commodity exchange trader in New York.

"We're looking for gold in the $600s by the end of January," said Vincent Tese, a partner in the commodity house of James Sinclair and Co. The house last December predicted gold would be in the $460-$520 range by the end of 1979.

Gold had risen to $444 an ounce in early October, but then slid to less than $400. The metal began rising again in early November, after the seizure of U.S. hostages at the U.S. embassy in Tehran.

West German dealers blamed the new U.S. dollar decline on the worsening of the American-Iranian dispute and reports of Soviet military activity in Afghanistan.

But the dollar has been falling month after month and each time dealers give a different reason for it.

In the last two months the dollar has lost 11 cents against the pound and 8 pfennigs against the mark.

Antarctic reef holds cruise ship

PUNTA ARENAS, Chile (AP) — The cruise ship Lindblad Explorer, aground in the Antarctic after transferring 114 tourists and crew members to a Chilean icebreaker, restarted its engines but could not break free of a reef which punctured its outer hull, a Chilean naval spokesman said.

"The ship swung around on the rock and was able to drop both anchors, but she could not get free," a spokesman for Chile's 3rd Naval District said Wednesday.

The 2,236-ton Explorer plowed into an uncharted reef Monday. There were no injuries among the crew, passengers or a movie crew returning from filming the final scenes of a science-fiction thriller about a virus destroying the world.

The spokesman said a skeleton crew of 11 men and 10 officers, including Captain Eric Lars Granquist, remained aboard the Swedish ship. It was reported in Gerlache Stait off the coast of Graham Land.

An ocean-going Russian tugboat, the Urugan, arrived alongside the stranded vessel early today to try to pull the ship loose.

Divers set to check capsized freighter

A team of seven Esquimalt-based divers is poised to check the hull of the capsized freighter Lee Wang Zin for signs of life if raging North Pacific storms give them the chance.

The hulk has now drifted on to Kendrick Island, five miles north of her last reported position on Wednesday.

A U.S. Coast Guard cutter and a Rivtow tug from Vancouver are standing by but have been unable to get a line on the Lee Wang Zin.

The U.S. cutter Munro was expected to arrive on the scene in 10 to 12 hours. She is equipped with a helicopter pad and has a sick bay and team of divers.

Southeast winds gusting to 55 knots, hail and waves of 15 to 29 feet were hampering rescue efforts.

Canadian and United States rescue teams have said there is a slight chance survivors among the crew of 30 Taiwanese sailors might be trapped in the hull of the Panamanian-registered bulk carrier which overturned in heavy seas on Christmas Day.

But those hopes dimmed as the number of unoccupied life rafts found in the area climbed to two. One body has been recovered and gale-force winds and heavy rain were expected to continue.

Meanwhile, the 222-metre Lee Wang Zin, bound for Japan with iron ore pellets it took on at Tasu in the Queen Charlotte Islands and 1,000 metric tonnes of bunker C fuel oil, drifted into U.S. waters on Wednesday.

The U.S. Coast Guard has assumed command of the rescue operation with the change of jurisdiction but a U.S. Navy diving team is not expected to reach the area until later today.

The divers from CFB Esquimalt and a Labrador helicopter from CFB Comox are waiting in Prince Rupert, 95 kilometres south of the wrecked ship.

The Canadian Coast Guard cutter Alexander Mackenzie and the commerical tug Cindy Mozel out of Prince Rupert are standing by the 15,528-ton Lee Wang Zin.

Capt. Ron Aumonier of the Rescue Co-ordination Centre here said divers are needed to get a line attached to the freighter which is slowly drifting toward the rugged Alaska coastline.

A U.S. cutter armed with oil spill containment equipment had been dispatched from Seattle but there were no reports of major oil leakage from the battered freighter.

Aumonier said if the weather gives divers a chance they will either try to enter the hull to search for signs of life or at least tap on it to see whether anyone will answer.

"The vessel overturned very quickly," said Lt.-Cmdr. Dick Pepper of the rescue centre. "There is a possibility of the crew being trapped on board.

"There is always a chance of survival. We never give up hope. Stranger things have happened."

The shipwreck occurred after the vessel discharged the Canadian pilot at Triple Island in Dixon Entrance, an often-stormy body of water west of Prince Rupert.

The rescue centre got a garbled, faint SOS and had to do some detective work to find the Lee Wang Zin because there was no position report or enough time to track the signal electronically, Aumonier said.

Soviets add fuel to Afghan coup

Times News Services

TEHRAN — Afghanistan's Marxist President Hafizullah Amin was overthrown today in a coup staged by his old-time political foe, Babrak Karmal.

The coup report by Iran's official Pars news agency, quoting Radio Kabul, came as Soviet troops and equipment poured into the country to aid in an offensive against anti-Communist rebels. There was no word on Karmel's position on Soviet-Afghanistan relations.

Fragmentary reports from Kabul also indicated "some involvement of Soviet military personnel" in street fighting in the capital.

The coup followed a Christmas Day airlift of thousands of Soviet troops to Kabul, capital of neighboring landlocked, but strategic Afghanistan. The troops deployment was reported by State Department officials in Washington on Wednesday and strongly criticized as "blatant military interference."

The new regime immediately imposed a dusk-to-dawn curfew in Kabul and ordered residents to remain indoors.

The reported coup came against a background of growing discontent in the aftermath of a year-old armed insurrection by Moslems opposing the Soviet-backed, Marxist rule in effect in Afghanistan since the May, 1978 coup which toppled Mohammad Daoud.

Political analysts in Tehran said any assessment of the change would have to wait until more details of the Soviet military airlift become available.

Karmal, founder of the Parcham Communist Party, served briefly as prime minister in the regime of assassinated former president Nur Mohammad Taraki.

Karmal went on the air soon after seizing power and

Islam N-bomb in the works?

KUWAIT (Reuter) — A Kuwaiti newspaper says Pakistan has reported to Saudi Arabia and Iran on the advanced stage it has reached in producing "an Islamic nuclear bomb."

The newspaper Al-Siyassa, quoting diplomatic sources, says this is one reason behind the visits of Pakistan's martial-law ruler Gen. Zia ul-Haq and his foreign affairs adviser Agha Shahi to Saudi Arabia and Iran, respectively.

Libya has greatly helped Pakistan in producing the bomb and it may be ready before the middle of the next year, the newspaper says.

Iran gets tough on spy trials

TEHRAN (UPI) — Iran, declaring itself virtually at war with the United States, warned that all the American hostages will be tried as spies if the U.N. Security Council imposes any economic sanctions against it.

Three American clergymen — Revs. William Sloane Coffin and William J. Howard Jr., and Catholic Bishop Thomas Gumbleton — ended their controversial Christmas visit to Iran and flew home via London early today, although the questions they raised about the exact number of hostages held in the occupied U.S. Embassy for 54 days remained unresolved.

The clergymen, who are carrying 33 personal messages from the hostages, said they saw all the captives — 43 of them — but the State Department insisted there are 50 hostages and the matter was unlikely to be settled until Washington and the clergy compared lists.

In a direct challenge to the United States, Iran's foreign minister said if Washington won Security Council approval for its plans for an economic blockade, Tehran would retaliate by putting all the hostages on trial as spies.

President Carter has said he would ask for sanctions against Iran and U.S. diplomats have been sounding out U.N. delegates about it.

The foreign minister previously said the hostages would be called only as "witnesses" rather than defendants at the grand jury hearings and diplomatic sources said they were likely then to be freed.

Ayatollah Khomeini Wednesday warned Iran was already "in a state of war, in a state of economic war" with the United States and said this could develop into all-out military confrontation.

CEC manager Wally Pickering sees reason for cautious optimism next year

By AL FORREST

Victoria's construction industry took a turn for the better at year's end and the outlook for the 1980s is for even more growth.

Building permits in the capital region for the three-month period from Oct. 1 to Dec. 1 totalled $36.9 million, up 12 per cent from $32.9 million at the same time last year.

And more than $50 million worth of projects is on the books for the new year.

At the top of the list for 1980, in dollar value, are the $21 million contract for the main section of the new Victoria General Hospital, closely followed by the Tillicum shopping centre, which could cost more than $18 million.

About $7 million in construction is planned at the University of Victoria in 1980 and another $5 million is the estimated cost of Sam Bawlf's condominium project on the waterfront in the 1000-block Wharf.

The total also includes $2.5 million for the trade and convention centre, a key to the future prosperity of the city.

In releasing the numbers, Canada Employment Centre manager Wally Pickering said Victorians could enter the 1980s in a state of cautious optimism.

"I hope all these planned projects go through," he said.

"It would make a positive impact on the local contruction industry if they do."

Construction, he said, was the weak point in the economy of the capital city during most of the 1970s and these projects give hope for the future.

He said a survey by his information officer Dan Bowes showed that building permits issued during the most recent three months totalled $36,984,591 in the capital region.

Biggest increases came in the City of Victoria, Sidney and North Saanich.

Permits were down in Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt.

Areas that showed increases in building permits during the three months (Oct. 1 to Dec. 1) with 1978 figures in brackets were:

Victoria City $10,954,918 ($7,457,402).

Sidney $4,636,579 ($1,819,494).

North Saanich $2,685,446 ($1,541,649).

Those showing decreases were:

Saanich $12,832,366 ($14,676,815).

Oak Bay $538,834 ($945,077).

Esquimalt $629,485 ($735,520).

Central Saanich $1,261,120 ($1,838,682).

Western Communities $3,445,843 ($3,911,002).

Biggest project in Victoria City during the most recent three months was a building permit for a $2.2 million apartment project at 1745 Leighton in November.

In October there had been a $1.3 million contract for a medical dental building at 2020 Richmond.

In Sidney the biggest permit was for a $1.3 million airplane manufacturing plant for Trident. The building will be completed, although the future of the company is in doubt.

Biggest project in Saanich was $1.2 million for a shopping complex at 3995 Quadra.

In Esquimalt a project for three townhouses totalled $135,000 while alterations to a liquor store totalled $123,000.

In Oak Bay a bank addition was worth $140,000.

Projects gone to tender include an expansion of the University Heights Shopping Centre, additions to the Fairfield Shopping Plaza and and expansion of the Queen Alexandra Hospital.

Stop! Just think it over

Ah, what a meal. Turkey, cranberry dressing, roast duck with exquisite dressing, sweet peas, corn and fluffy mashed potatoes with superb gravy.

There was plum pudding with cognac and covered with rum icing and a mountain of shortbread.

The coffee was superbly brewed, set off ideally with a glass of Grand Marnier.

So who wants to hear about a kid in Bangladesh or Swaziland who rooted through garbage and came up with a fly-covered piece of meat for Christmas?

That's enough to turn your stomach, isn't it?

But the facts of a cruel world can't be ignored. Canadians are enjoying the second-highest standard of living in the world, but if you stop and think about it, we are all here by an accident of birth or immigration.

You can do a lot to help your fellow man in far-off places through the Unitarian Service Committee.

It is definitely humanitarian and, thanks to its founder, Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova and the shoulder flashes on her familiar uniform, it is known abroad as Canadian.

So you had the sort of festive coming together of bounty and family that will give you a glow for weeks to come. Why not add a little more lustre to the memory by bringing some joy to a child in Hong Kong or Nepal or Indonesia?

Until Dec. 31, 1979, donations may be made at the Times business office or sent to the Victoria Times, Post Office Box 300, Victoria, V8W 2N4 — or left at any branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia. After Monday, donations should be mailed directly to the Unitarian Service Committee, 56 Sparks Street, Ottawa K1P 5B1. Cheques should be made payable to the Unitarian Service Committee.

A-G's offices open

The ministry of the attorney-general was open for business on Monday.

Director of personnel Peter Clark said today all ministry offices were staffed on the day before Christmas.

The Times reported Monday that a 9 a.m. check showed the attorney-general's ministry was closed.

Although most government offices were open Monday, many desks were empty. The employees used holidays of accumulated overtime to stretch out the Christmas break.

City men charged with murder try on hospital patient

Two Victoria men have been charged with attempted murder following an attack upon a patient at Victoria General Hospital Sunday night.

William Lloyd Christie, 44, and William Richard Johnson, 34, appeared Monday before Judge Fred Green and were remanded to Jan. 2 on joint charges of attempted murder and possession of a weapon dangerous to the public peace.

The charges arise out of an incident Sunday when patient Terry Adams was attacked with a length of pipe.

Adams suffered multiple cuts to his head, arms and chest.

He was discharged from hospital Wednesday.

Tree lights blamed for $17,000 blaze

Faulty Christmas tree lights are blamed for a fire on Wednesday that caused $17,000 damage to a house at 1431 Pembroke.

Occupants Mr. and Mrs. G.A. Dixson were not at home when the fire was spotted by a neighbor at 6:29 p.m.

Victoria deputy fire chief Mike Heppell said firemen kept the blaze from spreading beyond the living room but there was extensive smoke damage throughout the single-storey house.

Heppell said there was about $15,000 damage done to the building and contents loss has been put at $2,000.

In another fire shortly before noon Wednesday about $9,000 damage was done when a fire broke out in a shed at 1611 Myrtle and spread to a garage next door.

Heppell said the fire started in a box of hot ashes that had been placed in the shed by owner H.B. Duke.

Flames spread to the garage owned by Phyllis Pye.

The loss in each case was put at $4,500.

There was only one traffic accident that resulted in serious injury over the Christmas holiday.

City police said Rudolph Hoffman, 78, of 102-954 Dingley Dell suffered a crushed left arm Wednesday afternoon when he fell under the wheels of a B.C. Hydro that was pulling into the bus stop in front of 726 Yates.

He is in satisfactory condition in Victoria General Hospital.

The driver of the bus was Frank Chevrier, 43, of 305-105 Gorge Road East.

'I doubt you will ever return to this country'

A 35-year-old American has been given a nominal one day in jail by county court Judge E.J.C. Stewart who said the man has been punished enough by spending almost 18 months in custody.

Frank Piersanti of Chicago, whose real name is Steven Cavanaugh Manning, pleaded guilty Dec. 17 to possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking.

He was among 15 men arrested July 15, 1978, when police and armed forces found 13½ tons of Colombian marijuana, said to be worth $20 million wholesale, on Obstruction Island in Shelter Inlet northwest of Tofino.

Two men pleaded guilty earlier and were sentenced to 10 years, four were found guilty by a jury last April and were sentenced to terms ranging from four to 10 years, and eight more are awaiting a non-jury trial expected to be held in the late spring.

Piersanti was to be deported to the U.S. almost immediately.

Judge Stewart said the detention order which kept Piersanti in custody was relevant to his sentencing and he also took into account the guilty plea.

He regarded the period from his re-arrest after last April's trial until Christmas Eve as a period of probably complete hopelessness for Piersanti.

No term imposed now could be lengthy.

"I doubt if you will ever return to this country even for legitimate reasons," he said. "You have been punished. Such punishment is sufficient," he said.

Piersanti was sentenced to 3½ years in New Brunswick in 1976 for possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking but only served 14 months in prison before being released on parole and deported to the U.S. One of the conditions of his parole, which lasted to this fall, was that he not return to Canada.

Stewart said the only evidence before him implicating Piersanti in what was then Canada's biggest soft-drug seizure was his arrest on a boat which was quite clearly involved and traces of marijuana on his shoes.

He noted that Piersanti was tried last April, had two charges quashed on technical grounds and found not guilty of a third charge, only to be immediately re-arrested and charged with three offences, two of them the same as the quashed counts but with the technicality overcome.

When Piersanti pleaded guilty Dec. 17, only one charge was read against him. More serious charges carrying a seven-year minimum were not presented to court.

Also in county court Monday, Judge Stewart fined Wendy Lynn Hanson, 21, $50 for possession of marijuana and $50 for possession of cannabis resin — but gave her a suspended sentence and two years probation for trafficking 1½ grams of cocaine for $175 in Oak Bay Dec. 8, 1978. She pleaded guilty to all three offences.

Judge Stewart said her age, no previous criminal record and rehabilitative efforts in the past year were sufficient not to impose jail for trafficking.

"This will give you a chance to prove you have rehabilitated yourself," he said. "If not, you will be back."
